The boy is back in town: catch up with Bart in the new series of The Simpsons

MATT GROENING

Each month Cable Guide's Brian Viner reviews what's new and happening with the stars

WHAT A CARRY ON

Now, I must be nice about Barbara Windsor because, like many stars of stage and screen, she subscribes to a cuttings service that sends her a copy of everything that is written about her, no matter where, no matter when. It is not at all difficult being nice about Barbara, one of the most convivial and generous-spirited of celebrities, but all the same, I would hate to drop off her Christmas card list, not least because her cards are generally a hoot, such as the one a couple of years ago which had her posing by a waterfall in a skimpy bikini. It was captioned Viagra Falls.

At 64, and with a husband, Scott, some decades her junior, Barbara retains a healthy sense of fun about her image. Indeed, she relishes telling people that the first female breast Scott ever saw was hers – in Carry On Camping. 'Yeah, and it was the first time most of his friends had seen one too. One of them said he'd just seen Carry On Camping and you could see Barbara Windsor's bosom, so they all shot off to the cinema.'

This month, Paramount celebrates the art of the Carry On film, with their Carry On Weekend.

The perception of Barbara as the Carry On girl, which did not recede until she joined EastEnders as Peggy Mitchell, was in any case decidedly inappropriate, she says. 'I only did eight out of 30, in 20 years. I was offered Cleo and Cabby and others, but I always refused because I didn't want to be known as that girl. I remember walking through Victoria with Sid [James] when he told me I'd be remembered as the Carry On girl, and I said, "But Joanie [Sims] has done more". As it turned out, Sid was right. But actually I wasn't typecast until they started doing those primetime TV compilations, without asking us or paying us. That hit my career badly.

'I was 40-odd and still identified as the Carry On girl. I had to wait until I was 57 to play my age.'

Carry On Weekend, Paramount Comedy Channel, from Friday 2nd, 10.00pm

Clive's master plan

What a shame it is that Clive Anderson's first name is not Anders. Perhaps he could change it, and thereby become an even more appropriate successor to the original host of Mastermind, Magnus Magnusson. For the venerable quiz show returns this month, with Anderson asking the questions. He has, in fact, been paid for asking questions all his working life, first as a lawyer, then at the helm of various chat-shows, and now as a quizmaster.

It is probably safe to assume that the responses he elicits on Discovery Mastermind – which starts on Discovery this month, with exactly the same format as of old – will be less controversial than some of those he got on his chat show. The Bee Gees walked out in indignation at his line of questioning, and Richard Branson chucked a glass of water over him, prompting Anderson to retort that having flown Virgin, he was quite used to having drinks spilled on him.

Indeed, Mastermind is in some ways an unlikely vehicle for a man with a PhD in repartee, and Anderson could find himself having to bite his tongue. However, he declares himself 'very much looking forward' to the prospect, and suggests that his own specialised subject might be the history of Arsenal FC. He still plays the occasional game of five-a-side football at Arsenal's Highbury Stadium with David Baddiel, Angus Deayton and one of Punt and Dennis – he's not absolutely sure which. I ask whether he resents his friend Angus Deayton's sex god status? 'Yes. He's TV's Mr Sex and I'm TV's Mr Duncan-Smith.'

Anderson has long milked his baldness for all it is worth, and perhaps fractionally more. He started going bald at 20, 'but I have always had a juvenile face so I went from looking 13 to looking 50, although in court, where I wore a horsehair wig, I still looked 13. Unfortunately, I look youthful in court and old on television, and it's supposed to be the other way round.' He's started so I might as well let him finish. 'So I'm all for television presenters wearing horsehair wigs.'

Discovery Mastermind, weekdays from 12th, 8.00pm

MOCK AND ROLL

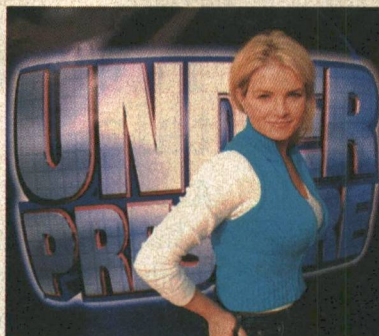

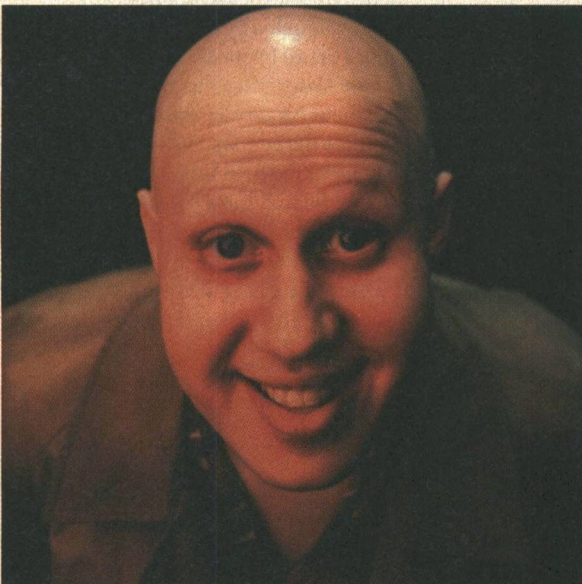

Matt Lucas might be best known for playing a baby, but in fact he is 27 and, aptly for a chap whose celebrated alter ego is the romper-suited George Dawes on the Reeves and Mortimer show Shooting Stars, something of a rapidly rising star himself. Endearingly, he tells me proudly that Robbie Williams is a fan of his series Rock Profile, the spoof music documentary in which he and his partner David Walliams play a variety of pop stars all interviewed by Jamie Theakston. 'Yes, and David met Geri Halliwell, and she quoted me as her. She said "Give us a kiss" which is what our Geri is always doing. And George Michael likes the show, apparently. And I believe George Harrison has asked for a tape.'

This month sees an hour-long special called Rock the Blind, about the recording of a charity record by Gary Barlow, played by Lucas. The "Gary Barlow" figure misbehaves, gets dumped from the project, sues the charity and wins, whereupon all the blind people have to give their guide dogs back.

'No genuine disrespect is meant,' insists Lucas. 'All our impersonations are affectionate, even if the Gary Barlow one was a bit more pointed than usual. We did have to be told that we couldn't infer that he would sue a charity. You see, we'd got so into the character that we'd forgotten he was meant to be a real person.'

As well as Rock Profile, Lucas is working on a new series of Shooting Stars, and also a play called Taboo, scheduled to open in London this month and written by Boy George. 'I play Leigh Bowery, who became a nude model for Lucien Freud, and in the 1980s used to run a nightclub called Taboo. He was famous for turning away Mick Jagger, saying "* off, fossil!"'

Rock the Blind, Play, Saturday 17th, 11.15pm

The pressure zone

Ruth England describes Under Pressure, the new gameshow she co-presents with Daley Thompson, as 'a hybrid of Gladiators, Superstars and It's a Knockout.' And while my mind is boggling, she tells me that the show's contestants have included a team of Olympic champions and a team from the Inland Revenue. Apparently, the Inland Revenue team had to manoeuvre a wheelbarrow over an assault course. I suggest that they should have been docked 25 per cent of however many points they accumulated, or for those high-scoring individuals, 40 per cent.

England would have liked to take part in some of the challenges herself, but was prevented from doing so for insurance reasons. 'I did take part in a football game at Charlton Athletic's ground, where you had to hit targets hanging in the goal. I found that very easy,' she says. 'I don't know what the big deal is about football. It's dead easy.'

England, 31, also presents ITV's travel show Wish You Were Here, so I ask what she does in her limited spare time? 'Wash my underwear,' she says. 'And look after my turtles, Jack and Bottletop. And spend time with my boyfriend, Toby.' In that order of priority? 'Not necessarily,' she says.

Under Pressure, Challenge TV, weekends from 17th, 8.00am 5.00pm and 9.00pm

Legal eagle

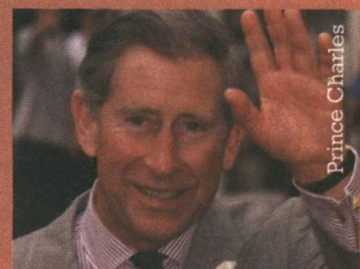

In 1973, Kathleen Quinlan was at high school in Mill Valley, California, when a casting director arrived to pick out some teenagers to appear in minor roles in the George Lucas film American Graffiti. Quinlan was one of those picked, and the film, which starred Richard Dreyfuss and Ron Howard, also launched the career of another unknown, Harrison Ford.

Quinlan's career has not exactly followed the same trajectory as Ford's since then, but she was nominated for a Best Supporting Actress Oscar for her performance as Marilyn Lovell, the astronaut's wife who in Apollo 13 (directed by her old American Graffiti colleague Ron Howard) had to keep her feet on the ground in more ways than one. Quinlan also shines in the lead role in Family Law, a forthcoming drama on LivingTV, in which she plays a successful lawyer whose life is shattered when her husband leaves her for another woman.

However, she cites neither Family Law nor Apollo 13 nor American Graffiti as the highlight of her career. Instead, she mentions a little-known family comedy film about a dog and a dolphin, called Zeus and Roxanne. Partly because it was suitable viewing for her young son, but also because she trained as a diver and gymnast before she took up acting, and that film required her to 'swim and swim' in the ocean with dolphins. 'I am really a sea creature,' she declares. 'Just a mammal that lost its fins.'

SPOTLIGHT

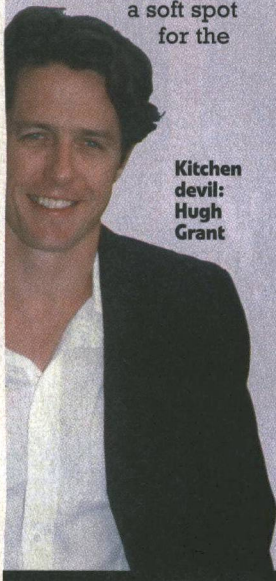

Celebrity gossip with Sky News' showbiz guru

NEIL SEAN

If you enjoyed The A-Team (UK Gold) in the 1980s, you will be pleased to hear that it's about to be made into a big screen movie starring none other than George Clooney. George now owns the rights and is a big fan of the original show, which once boasted an appearance by Boy George and Culture Club.

Don't be too surprised if you see Hugh Grant on Celebrity Ready, Steady, Cook (UK Style) very soon. I bumped into the actor recently at a top showbiz do where he revealed a soft spot for the culinary series. 'It's my fave show. I always want to make things like that once I have watched it. But alas, I am not a good cook.'

Fans of Alan Partridge (UK Gold) are in for a treat, as its star Steve Coogan is ready to make another series in the new year. But we can also reveal that he is in the frame to play the young Peter Sellers in a new movie based on the comic's life.

Changing Rooms (UK Style) star Anna Ryder Richardson has, we can reveal, been asked to tone down her clothes for the forthcoming series. It seems that Anna's fan base has grown – but all the letters and e-mails are from men, who, according to their wives and girlfriends, are only keen on watching Anna rather than the DIY!

Fans of eco-warrior Spider in Coronation Street (ITV2) will be pleased to learn that Martin Hancock, who plays Emily's nephew, is returning to the show two years after his departure. Martin will also be appearing in a brand new Brit film called 24 Hour Party People in which he bares all – in the name of art, of course.

IN PRODUCTION

Tinseltown tales

A new series takes a humorous look at Hollywood's not-so-famous inhabitants

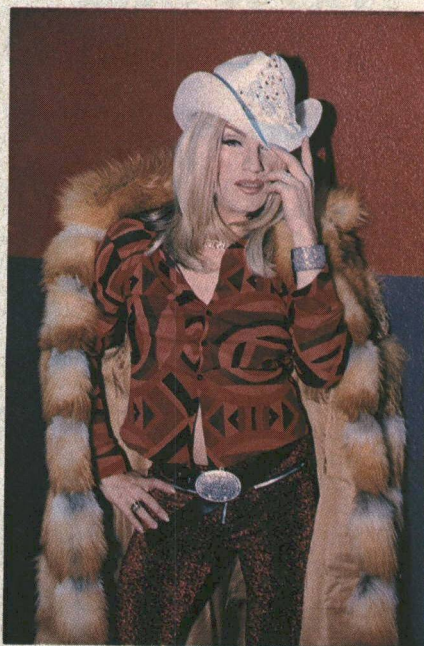

We've all heard the stories about the rich and famous in Hollywood, but a new ITV2 series lifts the lid on the other side of Tinseltown.

Hollywood Confidential, which is set to screen in January, will focus on the average Hollywood citizen. But as series producer Michelle Langer discovered, the term 'average' should be used loosely when talking about the locals. Michelle spent eight months living in Hollywood for the production, where, she says, 'we met a lot of crazy people and saw a lot of crazy things'.

'For Hollywood Confidential we decided that the basis for each programme should be whether or not a story would make us either cry with laughter or make our jaws drop,' she explains. And most of the time, it was the latter.

Making the 15-part series proved to Michelle that everything she'd heard about Hollywood excess was true.

'Everybody is just so flaky! We met people who will sell you the souls of famous people who have died, and a person who helps others who have been abducted by aliens. Then there was a breast hypnotist service, offering hypnosis for breasts as an alternative to cosmetic surgery. Everybody out there wants to be famous, and a lot of people are prepared to be larger than life.'

While she enjoyed her eight months in the Californian craziness, Michelle says she couldn't live in Hollywood.

'But I am going to miss the sunshine,' she says. 'And the valet parking!'

THERE'S SOMEONE NEW AT TINY AND CREW!

LivingTV has a Christmas treat in store for Tiny viewers next month with the launch of a brand new edition of Tiny and Crew. Tiny, the cuddly Wiganaurus, welcomes a new friend, Tammy – a bouncy, lovable doll, who joins Dog and Arabella, the inquisitive frog, to learn and have fun. Tammy will help Tiny roll the dice and hop around the Playboard, and, being an imaginative and energetic soul, she'll be full of ideas for exciting things to do. She's Tiny's best friend, and we're betting she'll soon be the Tiny viewers' best friend, too!

NO CITY LIMITS

For late converts, or those who just can't get enough of Sarah Jessica Parker and her pals, listen up. Paramount Comedy Channel is showing the first two series of Sex and the City in January, so you can settle back and see how it all began ...

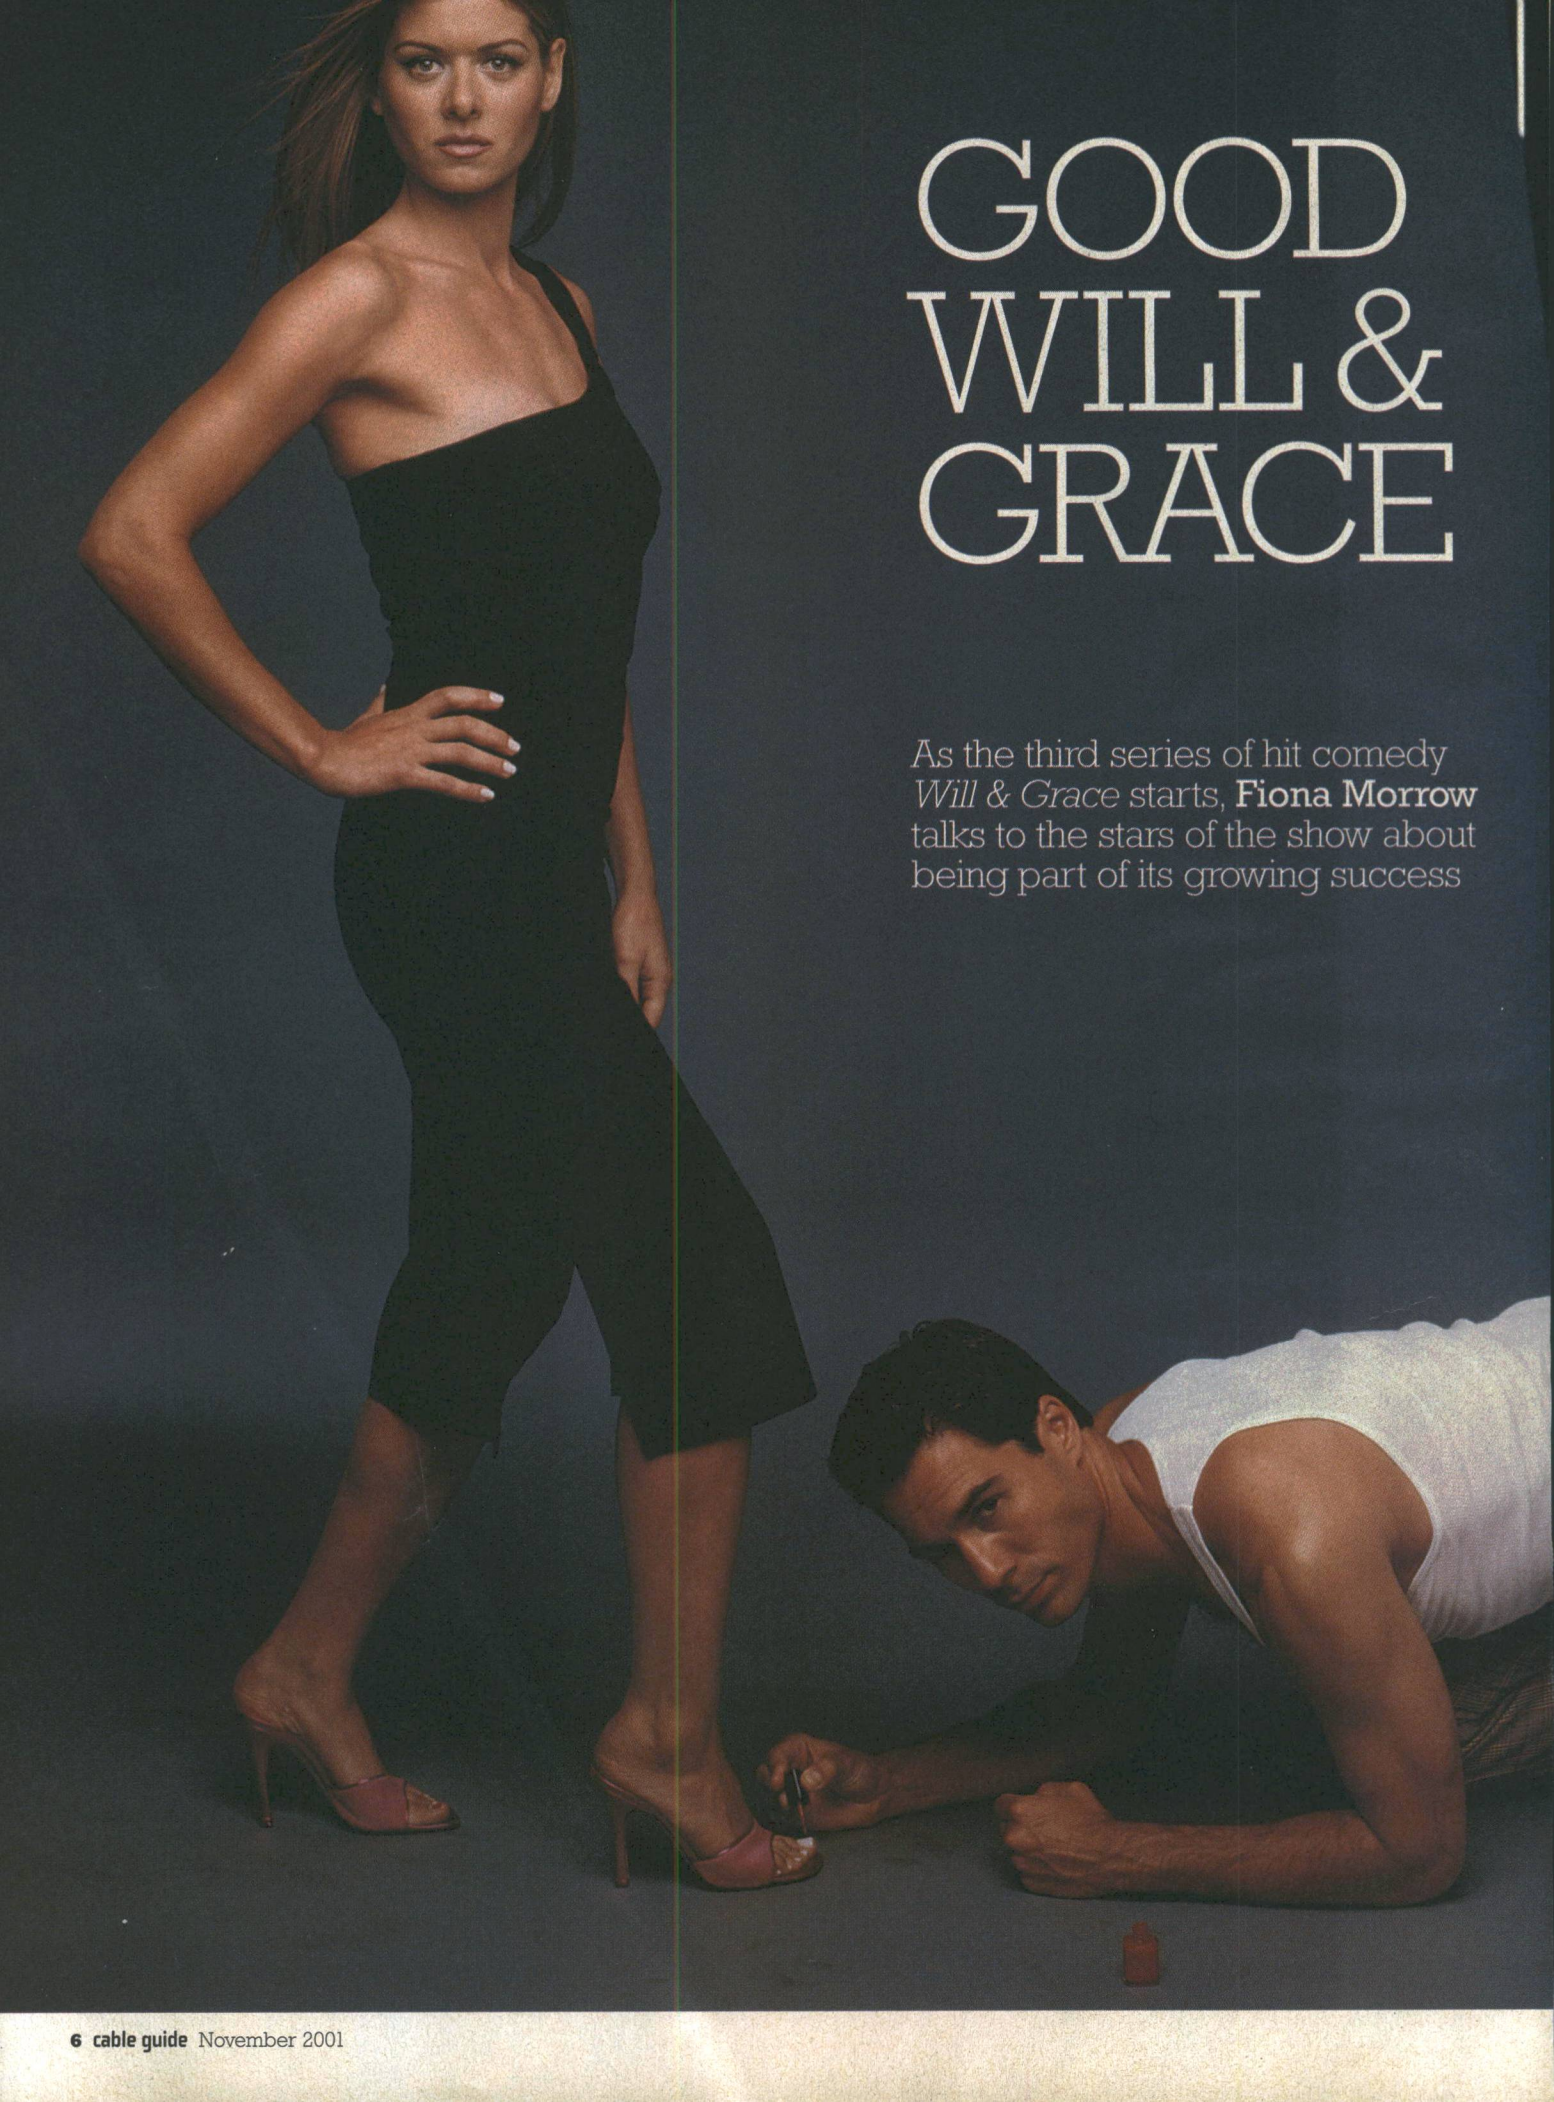

YULETIDE SPIRIT

There are plenty of specials on the menu at UK Style this Christmas, including a taste of Changing Rooms and Jamie Oliver. Carol Smillie is on the isle of Arran, bringing a festive feel to some neighbours' living rooms, while the Naked Chef himself entertains the family with a salad of salted preserved lemons, feta cheese, roasted poussin stuffed with potatoes and herbs and baked artichokes.

GOOD WILL & GRACE

As the third series of hit comedy Will & Grace starts, Fiona Morrow talks to the stars of the show about being part of its growing success

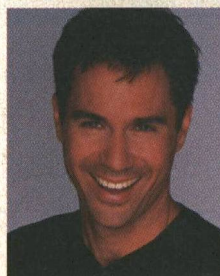

Eric McCormack and Debra Messing just can't believe their luck. Both actors were mooching around from one not very good television pilot to the next when Will & Grace hit their doormats. McCormack signed up like a shot: 'Sometimes you just have to go with your gut,' he recalls with a smile. 'To me it read smart and it read adult; it reminded me of Friends. I just had a feeling that it was going to be something special.'

Finding a co-star to play off McCormack proved more of a problem: the producers needed someone vivacious and spirited enough to act as foil to Will, the gay guy with a straight attitude. As soon as he met flame-haired Debra Messing, McCormack was convinced: 'We immediately had this great chemistry and we found each other really funny.'

Messing, though, was wary of signing on the dotted line: 'I was very leery of the whole project,' she admits. 'I felt that I understood this relationship - I am a straight woman, I have gay friends - it's a very complicated and wonderful dynamic and the last thing I wanted was to be on a show that didn't take it seriously.' She pauses, before raising her eyebrows and adding, 'Especially as I would be signing up for six years.'

Executive producers David Kohan and Max Mutchnick had to convince her of their commitment to the show, McCormack only had to turn up: 'Eric and I laughed and joked from the minute we met,' Messing remembers. 'So, I said, "Okay, sign me up", and the rest is history.'

And an award-laden history it is too. It may be taking its time warming up British viewers, but Will & Grace is a huge hit Stateside. Initially given time to find its feet in less pressured parts of the TV schedule, Will & Grace (on its fourth season in America) now occupies the coveted Thursday evening slot. McCormack was right when he compared

'Eric and I laughed and joked from the minute we met. So, I said, "Okay, sign me up," and the rest is history.'

it to Friends; Will & Grace now boasts some 20 million viewers.

It was season three, starting on LivingTV this month, which turned everything around: 'It seemed as though everything just settled in and then it exploded,' Messing laughs, adding, 'To say that it was daunting is an understatement.'

The growing popularity of the show can be seen in the number of special guest stars gracing the set. Joining the pitch-perfect Debbie Reynolds as Grace's amateur dramatic mom are Cher, Sandra Bernhard, Keith Allen, Ellen DeGeneres and Woody Harrelson. Patrick Dempsey also appears as Will's in-the-closet boyfriend.

The lack of sexual activity practised by these single 30-something urbanites is, however, something Will & Grace has come under fire for.

McCormack believes those critics are missing the point: 'We don't have the same freedom you had on, say, Queer as Folk, but we love the challenge that brings. We have to use double entendre and fast-paced Noël Coward-esque wit and sometimes I think those limits make for better television.'

Messing agrees: 'As soon as you take the sexual possibility away then you really can dive in to that screwball comedy,' she explains. 'And it's because you're never going to wonder about Will and Grace in that way that they can be so intimate.'

While McCormack loves nothing better than to spend his free time doing up his new home in the Hollywood hills, he's happy to embrace the extra responsibility which playing Will has brought him: 'My wife and I attend a number of gay and AIDS functions which is very positive, I think,' he explains. 'Too often straight actors go out of their way to make sure everyone knows they are just acting gay, and that's a mistake. I knew that the gay press would accept me as Will as long as I didn't behave like an idiot in public and start apologising for it.'

With the less controversial role, Messing has filled her downtime capitalising on her current success: 'I've just finished work on two feature films,' she says excitedly. 'Opposite Richard Gere in a thriller called The Mothman Prophecies and as Woody Allen's girlfriend in his new movie, Hollywood Ending.' She's still high on the experience of working with Allen: 'I was absolutely terrified,' she admits, laughing. 'I was just giddy every day because I couldn't believe my good fortune.'

Becoming so famous so quickly, though, has required some getting used to: 'It's always surprising to have complete strangers come up out of nowhere and hug you,' says Messing, with a giggle. 'I expected people to come up and talk to me, but not to physically mount me, so to speak.'

THE SPICE OF LIFE

A husband and wife team are bringing the taste of Thailand to the UK. Interview: Lucia Green

HE WAS BORN ON THE kitchen floor as his mother was preparing sticky rice for breakfast. His home was a small village in Thailand surrounded by mountains and rice fields, but with no running water or electricity. She was born into middle-class England in Berkshire and was sent to boarding school. He became a novice monk and then a cook, she became a university graduate and an accountant. They might have come from different planets, yet together, this unlikely husband and wife team run one of the most respected cookery schools in Thailand and are about to become television stars.

Sompon Nabnian – Pon to his friends – and his wife Elizabeth, both 33, run the Chiang Mai Cookery School, which is the subject of a 13-part television series The Thai Way. When they began the school in 1993 they had 42 customers a month, now they have over a thousand.

We are in the ritzy Langham Hilton Hotel, opposite Broadcasting House in London. Pon and Elizabeth are over here to promote the series and Pon, dressed immaculately in a royal blue shirt, shakes his head in disbelief when he looks back at his humble beginnings and their early struggles.

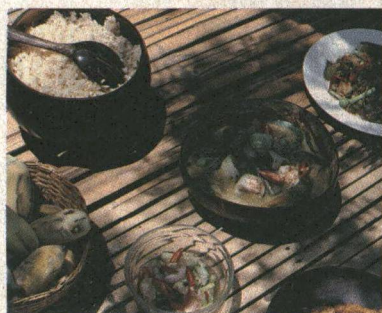

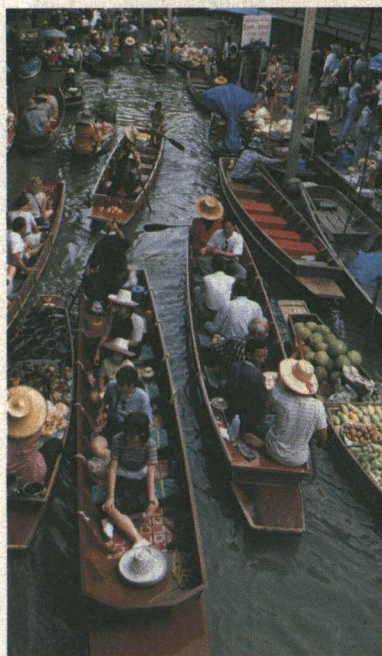

He is one of eight children and by the time he was six years old he already knew what went into a good Thai meal. 'My bed was near the kitchen, so every day I woke to the smell of food cooking. I would help them to prepare. To cut this, chop that, to help make the curry paste.'

Cooking became second nature. After his education – nine years as a novice monk – he got work cooking for tourists on trekking expeditions. It was here he met his future wife. Elizabeth was having a gap year teaching English after university before starting her career as an accountant. The attraction was mutual. Within six months they were married. She admits her parents were shocked at first. 'But once they had met Pon and realised we did love each other, we had their support.'

They have now been married for 10 years. They had two weddings – one in England, with outside caterers, and one back in Pon's village, where the villagers provided the food and the celebrations lasted for two days. 'My parents were happy that I was happy,' says Pon smiling.

'At first I didn't know much Thai so we got by on smiles,' remembers Elizabeth, who laughs as she remembers the first time she took a shower in the village. 'I had to use a hose pipe under my sari and the whole village turned up to watch. I believe their facilities are better now!'

Their first home was one room in Chiang Mai. 'It was worse than my student accommodation but it didn't matter. At no point did I think, "What have I done?"' says Elizabeth. 'It was a quick decision,' adds Pon. 'But I made the right decision,' he smiles again. And they both had an ambition, to begin a Thai cookery school for tourists. Within two years they had bought a small house and began using one room to demonstrate Thai cooking. 'I did the washing-up and the preparation and Pon was doing the cleaning and the teaching,' explains his wife. 'And after we had done the course, we would nip back to the office to try and get more people for the next day.'

The early years were tough, but gradually their reputation grew. Their customers come from all walks of life. 'We have backpackers and people who stay in the best hotels,' says Pon. 'We now have a proper school, and 20 members of staff – but I still do the cooking!' They also have three children, Benjamin, five, Emily, four, and two-year-old Charles, who feature in the series.

Viewers are taken through a five-day course in Thai cooking, we see Pon in the local market selecting the produce and follow him on his journeys through his exotic and fascinating country.

They may be putting Thai cooking on our map, but once a week Elizabeth's air-conditioned kitchen has a very different, yet comfortingly familiar, aroma. 'I have to cook Pon's favourite western food – roast lamb with all the trimmings.' As for herself, just give her a plate of green chicken curry!

FUNNY BUSINESS

What's it like being the only female script writer on The Simpsons? As the 13th series begins, Jenny Eden asks Carolyn Omine for the inside story

When The Simpsons writers start to argue about storylines, one voice stands out from the rest – the only woman on the team, Carolyn Omine. But Omine admits she's not afraid to shout as loud and as hard as the boys.

After three years writing for the award-winning show she's got used to fighting her corner in the testosterone-loaded atmosphere.

She says: 'When I come out with a really nasty joke, I sometimes feel like I'm not the most feminine person in the world.'

'I feel like I go back to being a girl when I get into my own office again.'

Emmy Award-winning Omine had spent eight years as a writer on comedy shows in the US before she landed the job with The Simpsons. But she had always been so desperate to work on the show she had insisted on a clause in all her contracts that she should be freed immediately if she was ever offered the chance to work on an episode. 'Everyone always agreed because they thought there was no chance,' she laughs.

But her big chance eventually came

10 THINGS YOU MIGHT NOT KNOW ABOUT THE SIMPSONS

1 All the characters in Springfield have only four fingers, but they have five toes

2 It takes six to eight months to make each episode of The Simpsons

3 Maggie is scanned at the checkout in the opening credits at $847.63. This is said to be the monthly cost of raising an infant in the United States

4 Only 11 people supply the voices for every regular character – there are more than 90 regular characters when she was recommended to one of the show's executive producers. 'It was staffing season, which is the time of year you have to get a job if you are a writer, or you're unemployed for a year.

'I had an interview with The Simpsons, then it was a month until I heard if I'd got it. I hadn't been offered anything else and I thought for the first time I might be unemployed.'

Although she is the only woman writer on the show, she admits that's not rare in US TV comedy. 'In everything I've worked on I've always been the only woman, or one of two. I don't think it's about prejudice, I just think there are not so many women trying to be comedy writers.'

'Only five per cent of the job is sitting writing a script. You sometimes spend 12 hours a day sitting round a table with the guys shouting over them to be heard. I don't think a lot of women would be comfortable doing that. And I think boys are encouraged far more than girls to be funny.'

Writing for The Simpsons is very much a team effort. Scripts are put together eight months before the show is screened, but there are changes and tinkering right up to the last minute to keep it topical.

The stories start with ideas brought in by the writers. Unlike other US TV shows, the network and studio are not allowed to dictate plots or themes in a deal that was thrashed out when The Simpsons first began.

Omine says: 'The writers' room is a really weird and wonderful place - it feels hermetically sealed from the outside world.'

When they get down to serious work, the hit show's episodes all start off with a germ of an idea which is usually almost unrecognisable by the time it hits the screen.

'We are always doing a couple of things at once,' explains Omine. 'People come in with ideas then we sit around and talk about it before it's ready to be written as a first draft. Then we go through and re-write it from page one and it changes tremendously. It's a real group thing.'

'Having your work re-written is the first thing you have to get over when you do this job. I always find the scripts with my name on at the end have the least of my writing in them.'

Among her credits are The Night of the Dolphins segment of Treehouse of Horror XI from season 11; Little Big Mom and the Great Money Caper from season 12; and Sweets and Sour Marge, to be seen in the new series.

The forthcoming series also features a host of big-name guests making special appearances. Executive producer Al Jean says the line-up includes Pierce Brosnan, Richard Gere, Paul Newman and Ben Stiller.

Jean says: 'Paul has only done one line for us but we were thrilled when he did it. Richard Gere plays himself in a storyline about Lisa becoming a Buddhist and Pierce Brosnan is the voice of a computer.'

'I always find it amazing the people who agree to do the show; I've met people I'd never have dreamt of meeting through being part of it.'

Meanwhile, Omine insists one of the strengths of the show is that the writers are allowed a free reign with their ideas: 'The Simpsons is a Shangri-la for writers; there are not a lot of places where you can have that freedom from interference,' she says.

Anyone who found themselves yelling at their TV during the selection process of the Popstars series earlier this year will finally get a chance to air their opinion with ITV's new series Pop Idol. The show follows a nationwide search for the pop world's next big thing, like Popstars – but this time it'll be a solo artist thrust into the limelight, and it's the audience who will make the ultimate decision.

More than 10,000 wannabe stars from around the country auditioned for the chance to be discovered as the next Kylie Minogue or Robbie Williams, at a cost, of course, of baring everything – egos, misguided confidence and tears – in front of a TV audience of millions.

Those who get through the several rounds of auditions with their dignity intact will be whittled down to a final 50, and from then on in it's the audience who decides who makes it through the further rounds.

The prize: guaranteed stardom, in the form of a recording contract with RCA and a deal with 19 Management.

In reality TV, we all know that it's the cringe-inducing moments – the tantrums, the embarrassing arguments – that make the best viewing. And ITV2's Pop Idol Extra will have more than its fair share of such scenes, with its no-holds-barred extra footage and live, behind-the-scenes access.

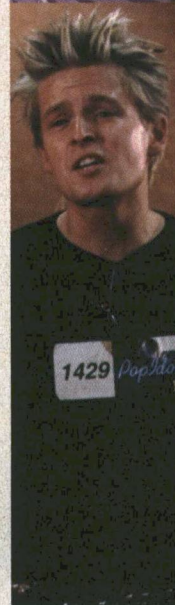

Thousands of aspiring singers, aged between 16 and 26, have been performing for an expert panel of judges, including top music industry A&R (artists and repertoire) man Simon Cowell, Popstars judge Nicki Chapman, and DJ 'Doctor' Fox.

But the real star of the show is likely to be fellow judge Pete Waterman, the legendary producer who, as part of pop producing trio Stock, Aitken and Waterman, launched the careers of some of the world's most successful pop acts, including Kylie, Jason, Rick Astley and Mel and Kim.

While Pete's ability to spot a potential star is recognised as unsurpassed (he ranks as the world's second most successful pop producer) so too is his candid approach to advising hopefuls on their talents. If you thought Nigel was nasty, just wait until you see Mr Waterman in action; how would you deal with being told, 'Sorry, you just don't look like a star' before you'd even opened your mouth?

'I'm Poisonous Pete,' he laughs. 'I don't see that I'm like that at all, but I do tell it like it is. I may be a bit harsh, but I want to give them some reality. When someone comes in thinking they're the next big superstar, with all sincerity, and then can't sing one note, then you've got to tell them straight.'

While Pete is associated with 'manufactured' pop music, he says that he's opposed to that process, and that Pop Idol will result in a different type of star to its predecessor, as it's a move away from the production-line process.

NOW SHOWING Pop Idol Extra

ITV2, Tuesday-Thursday from 30th, 3.00pm, 6.00pm

'I was asked to be a judge on Popstars, but I didn't like it,' he explains. 'I thought it was more television than pop music and the result is exactly what I expected. My pop stars tend to last quite a long time because I put a lot of work and thought into what we do.'

And he doesn't think Hear'Say, as a band, will endure. 'I just think the way they were put together was wrong. To me, there's no reality in it. That's not to question the talent of any of the kids in the group, I'm just saying it can't work when you put it together like that.'

'They don't look comfortable – they've won a competition, they've taken the money and they're running.'

With Pop Idol, Pete believes the outcome will be very different, as the show works more from the musical side. 'I think it'll result in a much better pop artist, because off-camera there were some very heated discussions between the television producers and us. We wanted to let some people go that were no good, but they thought they were great on television – they were looking for a TV show, we just wanted pop stars! The arguing and compromising will definitely make for a better result.'

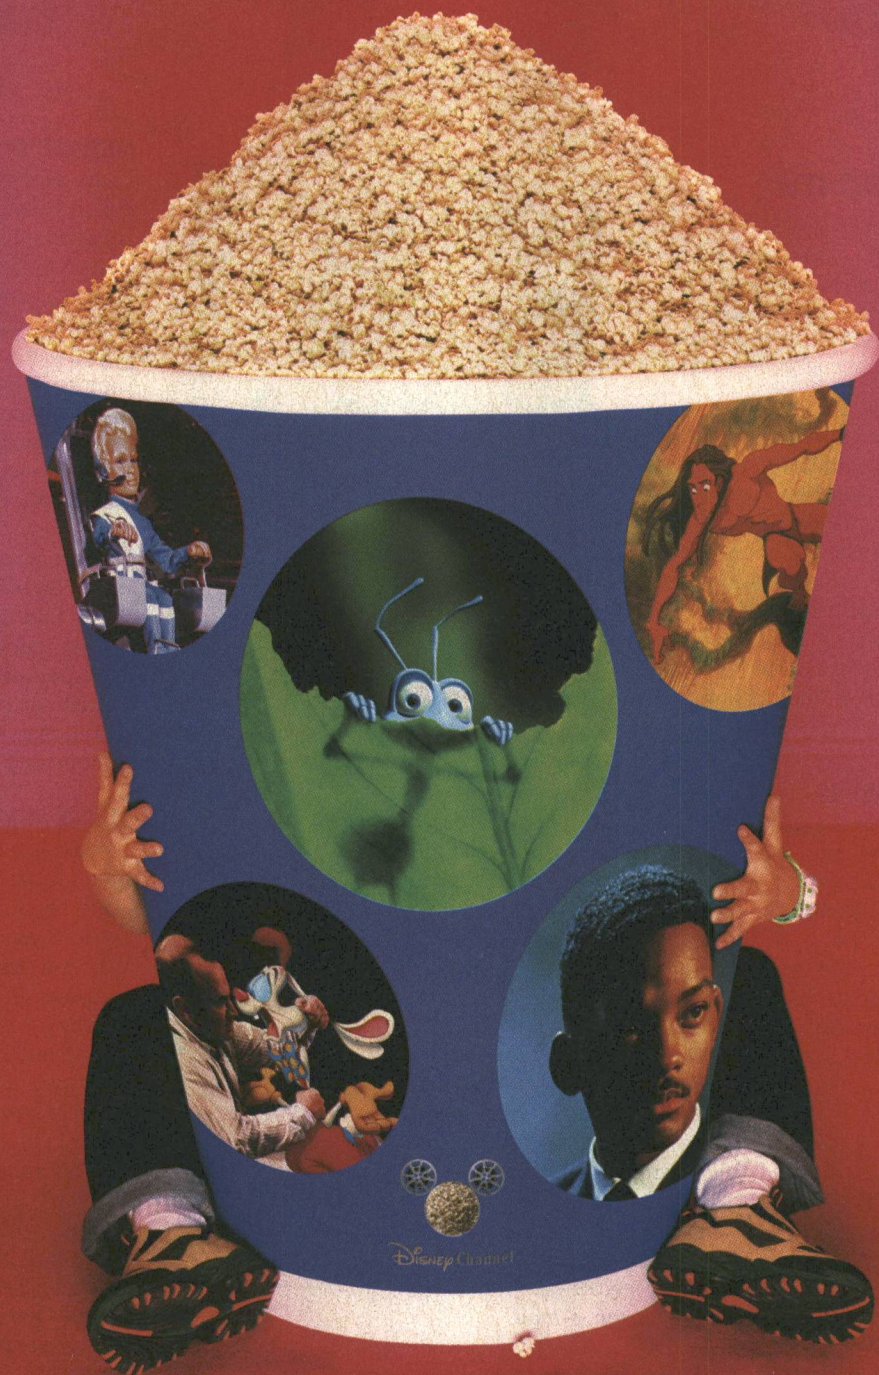

But that's not to say that watching the fight to get to the top will be anything less than addictive. With all the egos, the nerves, the bad singing and in-fighting among the judges, Pop Idol promises to be among the most compelling reality TV yet.

'There were lots of tears, as you'd expect, but tears were the least of it,' laughs Pete. 'There were even death threats! I can't tell you about the characters in the show but some of the reactions were quite extraordinary. A lot of the time from people you just wouldn't suspect, as well.'

'A lot of the guys who looked timid and shy were often the most outspoken when they were rejected, and the ones who came in looking all macho were often just devastated when told they can't sing,' he says.

'It was a great experience, but also very tiring, spending weeks on the road listening to lots of people who think they can sing. But it's going to make fantastic viewing.'

'I'm Poisonous Pete ... I want to give them some reality'

LETTER OF THE MONTH

John Edward fans united

Can you tell us more about the lovely John Edward on LivingTV [Crossing Over with John Edward]? He mentions a book he has written. Is it available here? I watch with great interest and I am quite addicted to this programme. May it continue for a long time.
Penny Ratcliffe, London

We have had numerous letters like yours, Penny – John is a very popular man! John Edward was born, and still resides, on Long Island, New York. He lives with his wife, Sandra. LivingTV tells us there are plans to bring John over to the UK sometime in the New Year. His book, One Last Time, is published by Judy Piatkins Publishers Ltd at 5 Windmill Street, London W1P 1HF. For the chance to win a copy of the book, log on to www.livingtv.co.uk. You can write to John in America via Sixth Avenue Productions, 423 West 55th Street, 3rd Floor, New York, NY 10019, USA. You can find out more about John at www.CrossingOver.co.uk.

HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

I am a big fan of the show Home Improvement, which is shown on Disney Channel. I'd like to know if they will be showing the eighth series of Home Improvement as I haven't seen it as yet. The channel have shown all the series up to number seven but at the end of the seventh series they started from the beginning again. I would be grateful if you could help.

Dave, e-mail

Disney Channel is going to show the last series of Home Improvement, and this is likely to be broadcast early 2002.

CATCHING THE BUG

I'm writing to ask whether Bug Juice will be coming back to Disney Channel. It's a great programme and I'd really like it to be brought back. Can you please, please, please bring it back?

A big Bug Juice fan, e-mail

Disney Channel replies: 'As you know, Bug Juice is all about summer camp in America, so we like to keep it as a special for the summer holidays. There are no plans to show it in the winter but we may see more next year.'

BEHIND THE TIMES?

I would like to compliment VH1 on their continued dedication to the superb Behind the Music series.

These shows offer valuable insight into the history of some of the world's greatest rock acts and the heritage of popular music. However, I am dismayed at the apparent lack of scope for European viewers, who only see a small proportion of these American shows. As a result, we know everything about Def Leppard and the Year 2000, but other BTM shows are rarely seen. Surely VH1 can afford to show the BTM programmes dedicated to other large American bands – such as Metallica, Green Day or the Barenaked Ladies – that are shown in the US.

Jim Stevenson, e-mail

A VH1 spokesperson replies: 'You are correct to notice that VH1 US has more Behind the Music episodes than VH1 UK. This is, unfortunately, because the series is made in America and VH1 UK buys episodes from our sister channel. When we buy an episode for the UK we have to clear airing it with all of the people who feature in the episode and, of course, this can prove to be costly. Sometimes the artist will not want the show shown outside the US – elements that are outside our control. However, you'll be pleased to learn that we are showing Behind the Music: Metallica throughout November.'

'I am a big fan of Home Improvement on Disney Channel. I'd like to know if they will be showing the eighth series ... as I haven't seen it as yet'

MASSAGE IN A BOTTLE

I have enjoyed the programme called Heaven in your Hands on UK Style, which gave very good demonstrations on massage, shiatsu and reflexology technique, shown by qualified professionals.

Will there be any more programmes like these, especially on the different types of massage-related therapies, like acupuncture, aromatherapy and naturopathy?
Janice Laucer, West Croydon

Heaven in your Hands was shown on UK Style in February 1999 and we're told that it's unlikely to be shown again. However, keep your eyes peeled to the channel this Christmas for the live shows, which may well contain items concerning stress-relief.

SINGLE MINDED

I would like to comment on Sky One's recent dating show, Single Girls. I find it hard to believe that the four young women on Single Girls can't find a mate. They are all so attractive, with perfect figures.

Why can't they give pleasantly plump and bubbly girls, such as myself, a chance – girls who actually have trouble finding a date? I think the show in some way discriminates against girls like me. It would be great to introduce us girls, who would love to have the luxury of living in the £1m apartment, and give us the chance to meet someone. This would give more confidence to the chubbier gals to go out and find the perfect guy! So come on Single Girls – don't discriminate, participate!
Ruth Daniels, Stockport

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'Thank you for your letter, Sky One is always keen to gain valuable feedback from viewers. The producers of Single Girls held a number of auditions – open to all prospective single girls. The producers were looking for a number of different qualities in the potential participants, who all had to be single before moving into the flat. The criterion for choosing girls was wide-ranging and it was not necessary for girls to have model-esque looks to be considered for the show.

The girls all had to undergo a range of tests, including performance in front of the camera, compatibility with their fellow girls, confidence to approach a guy, and a genuine desire to find their perfect partner. One of the aims of the show was to examine singledom in the 21st century, and we hope we provided all single viewers with advice and tips to help find the perfect partner!

BACK PAGE NEWS

What has happened to the Sky Sports programme Hold the Back Page? This was one of the most interesting shows on Sky Sports; always controversial and outspoken. We seemed to get some insight into the way clubs treat the media, and the way they treat the fans. It was never on at a regular time or indeed on a regular channel, and sometimes would simply not appear, but it was always worth watching. Please ask Sky Sports what is happening.

Alan Seddon, Liverpool

A Sky Sports spokesperson responds: 'We are glad that you enjoyed hearing the views of the journalists, Alan. Hold the Back Page ran for five seasons on Friday nights and gave our viewers a chance to hear the stories behind the back page news and the opinions of leading writers. This season we launched a new programme for Sunday mornings, Jimmy Hill's Sunday Supplement. This effectively replaces the popular HTBP, which we felt was coming to the end of its run. The new show sees Jimmy share his Sunday newspapers with three leading sports writers to discuss the big stories of the day and the main issues of the week. It's similar in style to HTBP with a similar cast, but at a more accessible time and is already attracting a very good audience.'

OUT OF ORDER

I am an avid viewer of all the cartoons that Fox Kids show. But some of the episodes from my favourite shows, Digimon, X-Men and SpiderMan, are repeated over and over again or are shown out of order. The Digimon second series episodes are only shown up to a certain episode and are then followed by either repeating the first series or the second series from the start. Can Fox Kids please show these episodes in order so I can watch my favourite cartoons?

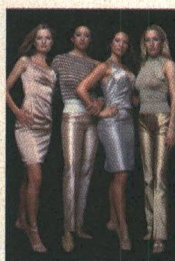

Parminder Baddhan, e-mail

Tim Patterson, channel editor at Fox Kids UK, replies: 'Fox Kids aims to bring you the best cartoons all of the time and the shows you mention are extremely popular. As a result we receive many requests for lots of screenings of these and episodes are occasionally repeated. New episodes of Digimon, series two, aired during October half-term followed by the launch of the all-new series three [pictured, left] on Saturday 26th October.

I hope you enjoy these and keep watching Fox Kids!'

DAVID'S PRE-DEL BOY DAYS

Could you please help? I am sure I remember a programme – either late 1970s or early 1980s – which starred the now famous David Jason. It was, I think, called The Life and Times of Edgar Briggs. Could you confirm or deny this, as I have mentioned it on numerous occasions to friends and family and they all think I am mad. Nobody seems to remember it. I believe it was a bit of a flop and maybe only lasted for one series. If this programme does exist, and as David Jason is now a household name, are there any plans at UK Gold or any other channel to screen this?

David King, e-mail

You're not mad, David! The Top Secret Life of Edgar Briggs was shown on ITV in 1974, and there was indeed only one series. UK Gold have no plans to show this series, but Only Fools and Horses is on weekends and Thursdays, with the lovely David Jason.

GET YOUR KIT ON

Where can you purchase the purple Dream Team kit? I know they are a fictional team, but I can't find it anywhere.

Joe D'silva, London

All is not lost, Joe! Sky One informs us that Dream Team shirts and rucksacks are available to buy. Call 0870 555 1111 for details.

Vicki Butler-Henderson

Some cars have cult followings for the wrong reasons. There is a peculiar breed of motoring enthusiast who would rather obsess over an old Austin Allegro than a sleek new Porsche

NOW SHOWING

Catch Vicki Butler-Henderson in Top Bikes, and Top Gear GTi, UK Horizons, see listings for details

DURING MY CAREER AS a motoring journalist – which scarily stands at just over a decade now – I've worked on a variety of car magazines. And in stark contrast to my penchant for fresh, fast metal, I have done a spell on a classic car mag.

To soften the blow of not reporting on new Lamborghinis and Porsches, I was given the loan of a Ford Cortina GT Mk1. I did manage to have some things. A treat I shall not forget. Unfortunately.

It is a wonderful and amazing fact of British life, though, that there are some people who spend their weekends absorbed in all things to do with their car.

Having a social life that centres on an Austin Allegro isn't quite up my street – but it's good to see enthusiasm is still alive and thriving.

There are hundreds of car clubs with hundreds of members who, perhaps, are a little nostalgic about motors such as the Reliant Robin, the Austin Allegro or the Morris Minor. They remember the halcyon days when these cars were displayed as new at motor shows, and like to hang onto those times. And there's nowt wrong with that.

There are a couple of cult cars that can't seem to get a big enough following, as they're having a second fun trips in it, and I did appreciate the fact that it was a classic car, in the true sense of the word.

However, it was never considered to be a cult car, despite it being a superior machine to many which carry that label today.

Perhaps the most obvious one to fit the cult criteria is the Reliant Robin.

A pretty disastrous car when it comes to handling – notably because it's only got three wheels. Sure-footed it is not, but cult it has managed to become. Del Boy and Only Fools and Horses can take all the responsibility for that one.

The Austin Allegro is another model that has somehow managed to attain the label – though I think its kitsch value has a lot to do with that.

When I worked on the classic car mag, I had the pleasure of attending an Allegro owners' celebration and had the honour of actually driving one of these lease of life – the Volkswagen Beetle and the Mini.

Some less charitable types might say they should have been left in the past – well, the names at least. The Mini's maiden era was golden and conjures up images of Twiggy, Carnaby Street and miniskirts, whereas the Beetle is surrounded by visions of happy hippies and Hollywood 'love bug' Herbie.

Today's versions of those cars are, unsurprisingly, very modern and a mile away from the earlier incarnations. They may come out well in Top Gear GTi group tests, but they fail to capture the essence and fun of their forefathers.

And for that reason, I cannot condemn the many fans who cling onto the past (a time when life just seemed so simple) by devoting so much of their time to their pride and joys. ⚙️

Queen of the RING

She may be petite, but in the tough domain of the World Wrestling Federation, She Devil Terri is one of pro wrestling's most powerful figures. Interview: Kylie Northover

TERRI RUNNELS IS THE longest-serving female in the World Wrestling Federation. But while she can fly off the top rope and bench press with the best of them, it's Terri's femme fatale image that has won her a legion of fans.

Starting as a 'manager' of other wrestlers (including Goldust and The Hardy Boyz), Terri would 'get involved' in the fights in the soap opera-like world, by distracting opponents with her flirting or playing up to the refs.

'I've pretty much always played the bad girl, so I would help the guys cheat and that type of thing. In the beginning, that was the extent of my involvement,' says Terri.

'I'm not trained as a pro wrestler, so I'm not as comfortable doing that as I am just being thrown half-way across the room by some guy in the ring fighting his own match!'

In the UK to promote this month's WWF Rebellion event in Manchester, Terri is obviously no pushover.

The Georgia-born wrestler, who made her World

Wrestling Federation debut in 1996, first entered the ring in 1985. 'As long as people say I'm the longest-serving, not the oldest!' Terri, now 30-something, laughs.

'Most of the girls get into it through a husband or brother or father, but I got into it when I was doing make-up for CNN.

'On Saturdays they filmed wrestling at the studios and I would do their make-up. Then I started working with them on the air. Then later I moved to the World Wrestling Federation.'

While Terri was popular as the hands-off manager character of Marlina (her first World Wrestling Federation incarnation), before long she was taking some serious slamming on the mats alongside the big names of wrestling. It can't have been the easiest career change. 'I've always liked to keep my body in shape. But I'd never really done anything very serious before I got into the World Wrestling Federation.

'I have to give kudos to the men and women who are trained wrestlers. That wasn't really my thing. When I first got into it, as a manager, there wasn't that much physicality for me. But I had to progress with the business, with the sport, and I've become much more physical.

'I love to take the big huge bumps from the guys, I love to be slammed over a table or off the ropes,' she says.

So, she undertook training to cope with that sort of treatment, surely?

'Well, I don't know if you can actually be trained to be slammed through a table! What you have to do is just learn to suck it up and be in a bit of pain for a week or so afterwards,' she says, with alarming matter-of-factness.

'The guys - and girls - of the World Wrestling Federation are tough as nails. They do it night in and night out, whereas I'm physical only here and there. And when I've been physical, I really know it the next day.'

But for Terri, the thrill of performing live in front of thousands of her fans outweighs the danger of a bruised limb.

The World Wrestling Federation is a multi-million dollar, global phenomenon (this month's Rebellion event sold out in just 36 minutes), with storylines as intricate and compelling as any soap opera - and the fans treat the wrestlers like stars.

'It's so much fun having this other identity. I'm this really domestic, loving soul, but then I go to work and I get to be this bad, witchy woman.'

When she's not in the ring, Terri is a mum to daughter Dakota, seven, from her marriage to fellow World Wrestling Federation star Goldust. And no, Dakota doesn't want to be a wrestler.

'Although all her school friends think it's great that her mommy is a celebrity.' Especially such a sexy celebrity, no doubt ...

'Oh no, I'm not the She Devil at the school gates,' Terri laughs. 'I put on my PTA clothes for that!' cg

The Last Slice

As Trouble says a fond farewell to Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place with a special weekend, Neil Bonner catches up with two of the stars of the American sitcom, Ryan Reynolds and Richard Ruccolo

WHEN A HIT SHOW finally comes to the end of its natural life, it can sometimes spell the start of a long period of unemployment for its stars.

But if Ryan Reynolds and Richard Ruccolo, the two guys in the American flat-share comedy Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place, feared a long break away from the cameras once the show ended in May, they couldn't have been more wrong.

They've been working virtually non-stop and look set to become major stars of the big screen. But, unlike some actors who graduate from television, they're quick to sing the praises of the show that gave them their big break.

That's why they are more than delighted to host Trouble's Two Guys and a Girl Weekend this month, for which they'll introduce back-to-back episodes from all four series, including the UK premiere of the final three episodes fans have been waiting for.

In the show Ryan and Richard play, respectively, Berg and Pete, college students who are best pals and sometime pizza place workers (until series three when the Pizza Place was dropped and the show became known as just Two Guys and a Girl). They share their lives with a girl called Sharon, played by Traylor Howard, who lives upstairs and works for a chemical company.

'I used to live off pizza,' says Ryan, 'But I ate so much of the stuff on the show that by the second season I decided enough was enough. That was three years ago and I haven't had a slice since.'

Richard completely disagrees. 'I still love them. Pepperoni is my favourite.'

The boys, who live together on the show, also have very different views on flat-sharing. 'I've shared with some terrible roommates,' says Ryan. 'There was this one girl, Vicky, who I swear was the incarnation of the Devil!'

But Richard, a self-confessed loner, says, 'I never really had roommates. I don't think many people could deal with me and vice versa.'

Although the show has ended, the cast remain great friends. 'I live in Vancouver and only get back to Hollywood when the work takes me, but the three of us have stayed close,' confirms Ryan.

Taking the showbiz path during his formative years could so easily have gone horribly wrong for Ryan. At the age of 12 he landed a part in a TV series, which meant him having to move to Florida.

'I was there for four years and grew up very fast,' he recalls. 'I got into a bit of trouble and went off the rails. Nothing serious, just a lot of partying and drinking, that sort of thing.'

'I have really good parents, but I was a smooth-talker even at 12, and was able to convince them there would be an enormous amount of supervision, which there wasn't.'

At 18 he moved to Los Angeles and made a crop of pilot shows before landing Two Guys.

'And I became the clean-living boy I am today,' he laughs.

Ryan, 25 and single, says that he and his co-star are totally different but clicked the minute they started working together.

'There's probably about six hours of Two Guys footage showing us just cracking each other up. We were such jackasses and had so much fun.'

But Ryan wasn't laughing the day he indulged in his passion for skydiving. On his 13th jump, his parachute failed to open properly and he was almost killed.

'Fortunately, I managed to untangle it just in time, but now I hate flying and heights generally.'

That didn't help while making his latest film, a romantic comedy called Van Wilder: Party Liaison, which will be released in the UK next year.

'There's this one scene where I have to stand on the edge of a roof in New York City and I was absolutely terrified.'

Pal Richard, 29, rose to prominence through stage musicals and TV commercials. Just three months after moving from the East Coast to LA, he landed the part of Pete in Two Guys.

But, unlike Ryan, he had to take a string of jobs first, while waiting for his acting break, the most interesting of which was working as a security guard at a shopping mall.

'Well, actually, I spent a lot of time asleep under my desk – but I did catch a kid who robbed a jewellery store,' he says proudly.

Richard, who plays a gay man in his latest film, All Over the Guy, shares his life with actress Tiffani-Amber Thiessen (Saved by the Bell, Baywatch and Beverly Hills, 90210) – one of the most photographed actresses in LA, which has given him a personal insight into the downside of fame.

'It's fine for us but when you look at couples like Brad Pitt and Jennifer Aniston, whose every move is photographed, you wonder if fame is so great. Sure, the money is fantastic, but you give up a whole chunk of your life to get it.'

Ryan agrees. 'Some of the fans can be scary, too,' he says. 'One girl wrote to me every day for a year and a half!'

Ryan, can you blame her?

WICKED

If you stick around Nickelodeon this month you're sure to meet Pelswick Eggert

PELSWICK

→ Pelswick's just an ordinary 13-year-old kid, except he's in a wheelchair. Or, he's 'permanently seated', as he likes to say. But don't think Pelswick takes life sitting down – he's up and at it with the best of them.

'Pelswick's kind of a rebel, you can expect him to be involved in a lot of different situations,' says Pelswick creator cartoonist John Callahan.

John continues, 'I wanted to create a cartoon about a boy with a disability so that wheelchair-bound cartoon fans could have someone to relate to.'

Pelswick lives with his oh-so-politically-correct dad, his professional pest of a sister, Kate, and his two-year-old brother, Bobby. Then there's his no-nonsense grandma.

John's quick to point out that Pelswick's wheels often come in handy. 'He uses it to get out of tight situations, to get away, and all his friends jump on to the wheelchair with him. Also, in social situations it's a conversation starter.'

If anyone's going to give Pelswick a hard time it's Boyd Scullarzo, the school bully. 'But as with everything, Pelswick uses wit and humour to deal with him,' says John. And besides, he can always rely on Mister Jimmy, his guardian angel. cg

Pelswick, Nickelodeon, weekends, 8.00am (apart from 24th/25th)

→ Prepare for X-traordinary adventures as the second series of X-Men: Evolution hits Cartoon Network.

Following the success of the first series, the story of the teens with special abilities continues with dynamic new characters, and some familiar X-Men faces too, like Professor Charles Francis Xavier, who searches for mutant teens to train at college, using his telepathic powers.

'I like the idea of being able to use one's mind to its fullest capacity, like Xavier,' says actor David Kaye, who voices the professor.

'And playing someone a little older than me is always fun. Plus, it's kinda cool doing a character that Patrick Stewart has made famous,' he says, referring to the X-Men film. Released last year, it's the 100th top grossing movie of all time.

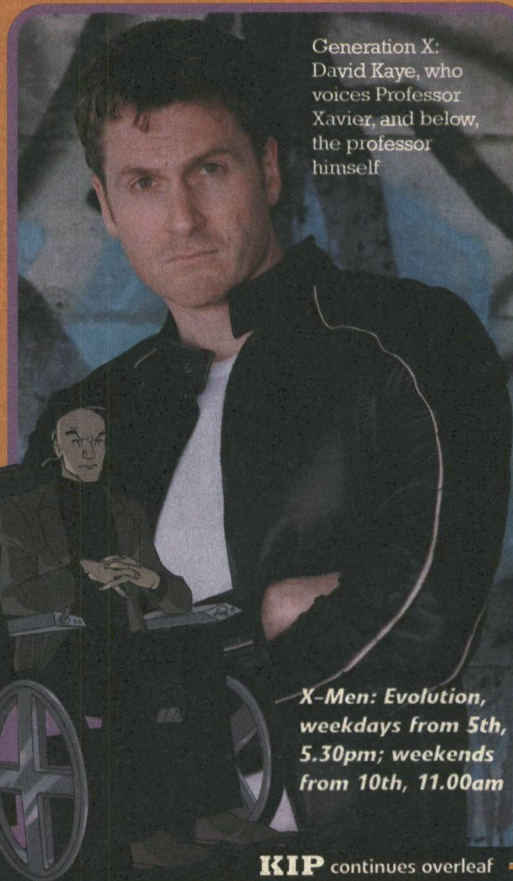

'I guess my biggest influence was Mel Blanc

(the voice of Bugs Bunny),' says the 37-year-old, who lives in Vancouver.

His interest in voice-over work started when he was very young. 'I was always experimenting with voices, mimicking everyone from cartoon characters to TV stars to parents.'

'When people actually started to pay me for this, I realised they were crazy.'

With 60 voices under his belt, it's clear that not many people seem to agree with David. cg

Generation X: David Kaye, who voices Professor Xavier, and below, the professor himself

BROTHERLY LOVE

➔ Shake the dust off your sombrero and get your samba shoes on, as we say gracias, Garcias, for returning with new episodes

Yes, The Brothers Garcia, with its all-Latino cast, is back to show that boys will be boys and blood is thicker than water, as Larry and his two older bros, George and Carlos, put those proverbs to the test.

From his witty, now-adult perspective, Larry (voiced by actor John Leguizamo) recalls growing up with his brothers, his twin sister, Lorena, and his parents, Ray and Sonia, in San Antonio, Texas.

Alvin Alvarez, who plays young Larry in what is his first regular acting role, says: 'I feel great being in this show as a Latino because other Latin people who watch the show will see someone who looks like them.'

He thinks his on-screen family are great too. 'The cast really get along. Sometimes we get mad at each other, but we still love each other, just like a real family.'

The similarities between real life and work don't

'Other Latin people who watch the show will see someone who looks like them' end there – Alvin and his character are both 11, they're the youngest one in their families, and they're bilingual Latinos. 'I don't have any brothers though,' says Alvin. 'And Larry is into outer space, unlike me. I'm into art.'

The A-student is very matter-of-fact about his acting success, which has also seen him guest star in Beverly Hills 90210 and ER. He still enjoys shooting hoops, playing the piano, and he loves listening to music – anything from Mozart to Sugar Ray. 'I'm a normal kid that happens to be an actor. I enjoy school, I still like to ride my bike and hang out.'

But it's not necessarily an actor's life for Alvin. 'I want to study to be an architect because I have always wanted to design a house or building.'

Oh, brother, there's no stopping this boy.

'I don't really remember why I started [acting] because I was so young. Now I see acting as a hobby, just like football is.'

➔ As Disney Channel hosts a special Smart Guy day, Kip catches up with Tahj Mowry, who plays whiz kid TJ Henderson.

Tahj says he is glad he doesn't have the gravity-defying IQ that TJ has. 'I wouldn't get to be round my peers and have a regular childhood,' he says.

Having a normal life is important to Tahj, whose sisters Tia and Tamera are the stars of Sister Sister. 'I still go to school and my mom and dad make sure I keep taking an interest in sports. And I watch a lot of movies.'

In fact, Tahj loves films so much that he's made three of them, two of which, Hounded and The Poof Point, can be seen on Smart Sunday, alongside Smart Guy episodes, on-set footage and interviews.

Tahj, who would love to work with actor Denzel Washington and hopes to direct films one day, began his career at the tender age of four, appearing in a commercial. Shortly after that he made his sitcom debut in Who's the Boss?

But his big break was landing Smart Guy. Tahj has also danced in videos for Mariah Carey, Michael Jackson and Prince.

Looking back, he says 'I don't really remember why I started because I was so young. Now I see acting as a hobby, just like football is.' In fact, as well as being a star of the big screen, Tahj dreams of being a sports star, too, as a professional American football player.

And if he's an actor, director and footballer, Tahj really is one smart guy.

SPACE COWBOYS

PREMIERE 126 MINS

Wrinklies with the right stuff are summoned out of retirement by NASA to save the world from an impending catastrophe the whippersnappers with laptops can't handle. Preposterously entertaining hokum from producer-director Eastwood, with the starry old buddies bringing irrepressible charm and presence to their doughy heroics.

BEDAZZLED

BRENDAN FRASER, ELIZABETH HURLEY,
FRANCES O'CONNOR

PREMIERE 90 MINS

Lonely, bumbling misfit Elliot Richards (Fraser) painfully learns the wisdom of the old saying 'Be careful what you wish for, you might get it' when he sells his soul to the devil in a red dress (gorgeous, pouting Hurley with an eye-popping satanic wardrobe) for seven wishes he hopes will bring him love and success. Naturally it all goes horribly pear-shaped – most uproariously when his wish for power lands him in the life of a flamboyant, feared Colombian drug baron about to be gunned down. Co-written and directed by Groundhog Day's Harold Ramis, this is funnier and sweeter-natured than the Peter Cook and Dudley Moore 1960s version, and handsome, hunky Mummy star Fraser is a comic revelation in his ill-fated, agile transformations from geeky nerd into such figures as a sophisticated bon vivant, a colossus of a basketball star, and sensitive new man. Surprisingly good fun.

BILLY ELIOTT

JULIE WALTERS, JAMIE BELL

106 MINS

It's 1984 and Billy is the child in a family of striking coal miners. When he strays from the boxing session he hates into a ballet class taught by the indomitable Walters, there's nothing stopping the lad with potential from leaping to the top – unless it's his horrified dad, who's having none of that sissy stuff.

BREAKFAST OF CHAMPIONS

BRUCE WILLIS, ALBERT FINNEY,
NICK NOLTE

PREMIERE 106 MINS

A heavyweight cast tackle this ambitious adaptation of a darkly comic Kurt Vonnegut novel in which prosperous but quietly going mad car salesman Dwayne Hoover (Willis, who also produced) loses his already weak grip on reality when he encounters reclusive, cranky science-fiction author Kilgore Trout (Finney).

COYOTE UGLY

PIPER PERABO, ADAM GARCIA,
MARIA BELLO

PREMIERE 97 MINS

Cocktail meets Showgirls when an aspiring singer-songwriter (Perabo), on her uppers, takes a job in a rowdy karaoke saloon where revealingly clad baristas dance on the bar and drench baying customers in tequila. Love and fame beckon, of course, but it's the brawling that most entertains.

DISNEY'S THE KID

BRUCE WILLIS, SPENCER BRESLIN

PREMIERE 100 MINS

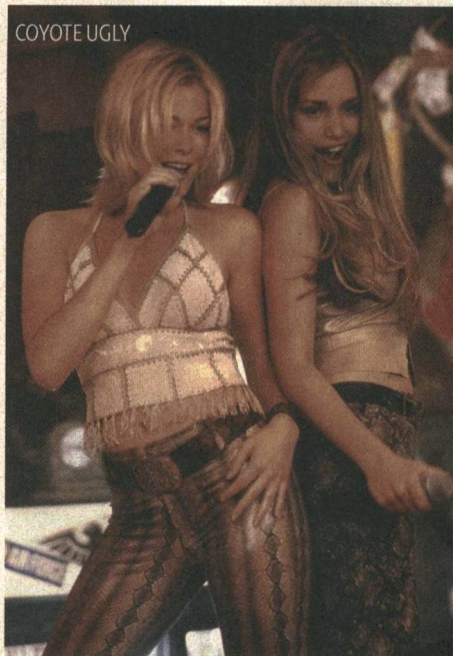

Warm-hearted, winning family comedy of an utterly mean, obnoxious 40-year-old executive (Willis in fine comic fettle) who improves no end by inadvertently getting in touch with his 'inner child' – supernaturally encountering his own eight-year-old self (engaging chubster Breslin) for amusing life lessons and plenty of feel-good fun.

THE FLINTSTONES IN VIVA ROCK VEGAS

MARK ADDY 88 MINS

The prehistoric prequel in which bachelors Fred and Barney meet their mates and holiday in the glitzy gaming resort, their dating antics challenged by Wilma's hoity-toity mum (Joan Collins).

GROOVE

LOLA GLAUDINI, DENNY KIRKWOOD

PREMIERE 81 MINS

This clubbers' comedy, set in a San Francisco warehouse rave, captures the mood of forgetting the work week to have it large. An innocent out-of-towner enjoys a night of misadventure, chaotic romancing and compulsive dancing. Legendary club deejays as themselves add to the lively mix.

HOLLOW MAN

KEVIN BACON, ELISABETH SHUE,
JOSH BROLIN

108 MINS

Brilliant scientist Sebastian Caine (Bacon) makes himself the human guinea pig in his invisibility research. But when his visibility serum doesn't reverse matters, he degenerates into a power-crazed maniac who uses his invisibility for nasty pranks.

THE LITTLE VAMPIRE

JONATHAN LIPNICKI, RICHARD E GRANT

91 MINS

Cute Lipnicki (Jerry Maguire) is a lonely little visitor to Scotland who befriends a boy hanging around the manor, unperturbed by his new mate's suspiciously long teeth and penchant for black clothes. Spooky family fun, with Grant a hoot as Vampire Dad.

LOSER

JASON BIGGS, MENA SUVARI

PREMIERE 92 MINS

American Pie stars reunite in the tale of a right country boy at a New York university who is out of his depth, used and abused by trendy classmates. Discovering his dream girl is having an affair with caddish professor Greg Kinnear, he resolves to turn the tables.

MEMENTO

GUY PEARCE, CARRIE-ANNE MOSS

PREMIERE 109 MINS

Ex-Neighbours heart-throb Pearce is superb in this exciting, highly original thriller – intriguingly told in a bold fragmented style – as a man with a rare form of amnesia tracking down his wife's killer by tattooing himself with clues and collecting souvenirs as evidence to tell himself where he is in his investigation.

ME, MYSELF & IRENE

JIM CARREY, RENÉE ZELLWEGER

112 MINS

More shameless japes from Peter and Bobby Farrelly. It's a wacky tale of smalltown cop Charlie (Carrey) who has a split personality. The trouble starts when both of his personalities fall for the same woman (Zellweger).

MISS JULIE

SAFFRON BURROWS, PETER MULLAN

PREMIERE 97 MINS

Filmmaker Mike Figgis uses experimental techniques and the intense performances of his two stars to highlight the modern themes of alienation and self-loathing in an August Strindberg play about obsession, oppression and sexual power.

GROOVE

VIN DIESEL, RADHA MITCHELL

104 MINS PREMIERE

This low-budget sci-fi horror thriller makes up for its modest resources and absence of stars with abundant ingenuity, inspiration and solidly believable performances from up-and-comers to watch, making it the finest fright of its kind in some years. When sexy space pilot Mitchell and her interstellar passengers – including members of a religious order and a psychokiller prisoner in transit (gravel-voiced Diesel) who proves very handy to have around in the circumstances – crash on a hostile planet moving into total eclipse, the stage is set for a nerve-twanging adventure full of juice, terrifically creepy special effects and nightmare aliens that go chomp in the dark. Cinematographer David Eggby gets atmospheric mileage out of the Australian landscapes.

THE 6TH DAY

ROAD TRIP - UNCUT

BRECKIN MEYER, SEAN WILLIAM SCOTT,
AMY SMART

91 MINS

Fans of gross-out youth comedy, along the lines of Animal House and American Pie, will be reduced to laughing until beer spurts out of their noses by this defiantly puerile adventure. After accidentally sending his estranged high school sweetheart a video of him making out with another girl (don't ask!), college student Josh (Meyer) sets off across America hoping to get to her before the post does. Along for the ride in a stolen school bus are a trio of buddies, who naturally instigate all manner of misbehaviour, disaster and politically incorrect hilarity.

ROMEO MUST DIE

JET LI, AALIYAH

110 MINS

A disgraced Hong Kong cop escapes from prison and plunges into a San Francisco street war between Chinese and black gangs to avenge his brother's death. This hip urban action drama boasts the balletic 'wushu' kung fu stylings of Li, and the late R&B star Aaliyah in the cast and on the soundtrack. It's hauled in with real tension by director Andrzej Bartkowiak.

SCARY MOVIE

ANNA FARIS, JON ABRAHAM, SHANNON
ELIZABETH, KEENEN IVORY WAYANS

85 MINS

Wes Craven's witty blockbuster Scream trilogy of horror - itself playing with parody - lays the foundation for this cheerfully absurd, taste-free spoof of the teen slasher flick genre. It's written and directed by a gang of US TV comedy veterans led by three brothers, Shawn, Marlon and director Keenen Ivory Wayans. Once again a masked madman given to heavy-breathing phone calls carves his way through a town's partying teenagers while a plucky-if-terrified heroine (the unknown, brilliantly funny Anna Faris as Cindy) puzzles out his/her/their/its identity.

SHANGHAI NOON

JACKIE CHAN, OWEN WILSON,
LUCY LIU

106 MINS

When a Chinese princess (Ally McBeal's Liu) is abducted in the Wild West, Chon Wang (John Wayne, geddit?) is despatched from the Forbidden City to rescue her. Jackie Chan is naturally ideally suited to this marvellous action comedy with his martial arts expertise and winning humour.

THE 6TH DAY

ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER, TONY
GOLDWYN, ROBERT DUVALL

PREMIERE 119 MINS

The Bible tells us God made man on the sixth day of creation, and man (in the shape of mad scientist Duvall and a far-reaching, evil corporate empire) is playing God in this sci-fi thriller, set in a not-too-distant future when cloning animals is common but cloning humans is supposedly outlawed. Family man Arnie (playing a character named Adam, to further the Biblical references) comes home to find he's been replaced by a DNA double. In order to reclaim his life, our hero embarks on the discovery of a vast conspiracy and improbably bonds with himself (courtesy of seamless special effects), while being pursued by a seemingly indestructible assassination squad.

SNATCH

JASON STATHAM, VINNIE JONES

99 MINS

A diamond thief, a Russian called Boris the Blade, a Gypsy boxer, sundry small-time hoodlums, pawnbrokers and illegal fight promoters cross paths to lethal and comically complicated effect in Guy Ritchie's audacious, highly entertaining follow-up to Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels.

SOFT FRUIT

JEANIE DRYNAN, LINAL HAFT

98 MINS

PAUL NEWMAN, LINDA FIORENTINO

PREMIERE 85 MINS

WONDER BOYS

MICHAEL DOUGLAS, TOBEY MAGUIRE

PREMIERE 107 MINS

A WONDERFUL LIFE

His role in Wonder Boys, as a bathrobe-wearing professor whose life is out of control, was a daring departure from the norm for film veteran Michael Douglas. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

Daramount Pictures executives thought so highly of the movie Wonder Boys that when it received a tepid reception on release early last year, they quickly withdrew it and started planning a new marketing campaign and re-release date for the 'awards season' – that time of year when the focus is on candidates for big prizes such as the Academy and Golden Globe Awards.

In that respect, the movie did not let them down. Bob Dylan won an Oscar and Golden Globe for his Wonder Boys song Things Have Changed and the movie received major nominations for its screenplay, editing and for the lead actor, second generation Hollywood superstar Michael Douglas.

And while the box office continued to be lukewarm, 57-year-old Douglas remains delighted with the finished product and what he calls 'a pretty nice year' in which he also starred in the four-time Oscar-winning Traffic.

'I'm really proud of the two movies, not just for my performances but because they stand out as really excellent pictures,' he says.

In Wonder Boys he plays Grady Tripp, a pot-smoking college professor of English and author of 'the great American novel'. But since its publication seven years previously, his life has become more complicated than ever.

The 'wonder boy' is now being pressured by his literary agent Terry Crabtree (Robert Downey Jr) for the follow-up novel, which Grady promises is almost complete but which, in fact, he is desperately struggling with.

On top of this, his wife has just walked out and the married chancellor of his university, Sara Gaskell (Frances McDormand), is pregnant by him.

Then there's his most brilliant student, James Leer (played by Tobey Maguire), who also happens to be an inveterate liar.

Douglas says he was looking for a different role after the dramas The Perfect Murder and The Game, in which he played sleekly dressed, wealthy characters, and decided on Wonder Boys because of the script and the director, Curtis Hanson (LA Confidential).

This time around he has a heavier build than usual and he spends part of the film clad in a woman's pink bathrobe.

'Oh yes, it crosses your mind, no question about it,' he admits, when asked whether he considered potential erased once the whole process started and then it just became this luxury to do a character part, open up and be relaxed and have a lot of fun.'

Now trimmed off again, Douglas still looks a decade younger than his age, although he laughs at widespread rumours of cosmetic surgery. Just check his schedule, he says. He hasn't had time.

With his wife, Welsh-born actress Catherine Zeta-Jones, 32, he is half of Hollywood's best known couple. Married only since last November, they have a one-year-old son, Dylan.

'We like to do the honeymoon first, then we have the baby, then we get married,' says Douglas, now grinning broadly.

Since Traffic, he has completed a psychological drama called Don't Say a Word for director Gary Fleder (Kiss the

'There was a moment when we were doing costume fittings and I was trying on pink bathrobes ... I said, "I'm going to be wearing this for half the movie? I don't know"' damage to his image. 'But I think you have to count on choice and if you're not going to take chances at this point in your career ...'

He lets the sentence trail off, but then continues: 'But it's a really wonderful script and if the director was not Curtis I would have had second thoughts, because there was a moment when we were doing costume fittings and I was trying on pink bathrobes when I said, "I'm going to be wearing this for half the movie? I don't know".'

'As Curtis was encouraging me to eat more and bulk up there was a concern, but it was very quickly

Girls) and Zeta-Jones plays a major role in America's Sweethearts, a comedy (interestingly about a warring celebrity couple) written by Billy Crystal and co-starring Julia Roberts and John Cusack.

Douglas says their plan is not to alternate when they work, but to ensure their times off coincide.

'Then we're all together as a family unit,' he says.

'That will change when Dylan gets to school age, but he's already proven to be a very good traveller and he's going to have to be doing a little back and forth between his mother and father while we do these pictures.'

BOY WONDER

Soon to be seen bringing comic book hero Spider-Man to the big screen, Lawrie Masterson meets rising star Tobey Maguire

Tobey Maguire, who plays the gifted and enigmatic student James Leer in Wonder Boys, has had a steadily building Hollywood career which now looks set to explode.

Maguire has been best friends with Titanic star Leonardo DiCaprio since they worked together in the TV series Parenthood in 1990. DiCaprio turned down the role of Homer Wells in The Cider House Rules – the part that shot Maguire to fame.

Following his highly rated performances in Ang Lee's The Ice Storm and Ride with the Devil and Lasse Hallström's The Cider House Rules, 26-year-old Maguire will be seen next year in the title role of the potential blockbuster Spider-Man, co-starring Willem Dafoe, Kirsten Dunst and fast-rising James Franco.

He describes making Wonder Boys as 'a blast'.

'Curtis Hanson seemed to me like he was having fun every day on the set, which was a great thing for me,' Maguire says.

'As a young actor I'm looking for the director to be my guide and he just made me feel like I could have fun and feel free to contribute my ideas. It just pulled me out of myself.'

'After Ride with the Devil I was beat, but then came Cider House and it was just a project I felt I had to do. Then with Wonder Boys it was the same thing.

'I desperately wanted a break, but then I heard about Curtis and Michael [Douglas] and I said, "Oh, no, I'm going to end up working again", but it was great.

'It was probably the best time I've had on a movie.'

The memory game

For Guy Pearce, starring in the highly original psychological thriller Memento was inspirational, he tells Joel Brady

IF EVER ANYONE HAS completed an apprenticeship aimed at calmly handling the public adulation that follows Hollywood movie stars, it is Guy Pearce.

Having built his American profile gradually with eye-catching roles in movies such as The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, LA Confidential, Rules of Engagement and the tantalising Memento, Pearce seems bemused when asked whether he is prepared for the general madness that surrounds major stars in the US.

After all, he had three years as student-turned-teacher Mike Young in Neighbours at the height of the Kylie and Jason hysteria.

'We were spotted left, right and centre walking down the street and the whole recognition thing became a bit crazy,' Pearce says in Los Angeles, where he has been completing a remake of HG Wells's The Time Machine. 'It's nice here because I don't feel like I'm recognised at all.'

British-born Pearce, 35, moved to Australia with his New Zealand-born father, a test pilot, and English mother when he was a child. His father died in a flying accident about five years later. Raised just south of Melbourne, he was a keen surfer and body builder as a teen and started his Neighbours role the week after finishing high school.

Now, despite his burgeoning Hollywood reputation, he and his wife, Kate, continue to live in Melbourne, politely deflecting all efforts to have them relocate to Los Angeles.

'I don't feel the need to leave Melbourne,' Pearce says. 'I love it there. It's my home. To me, LA is like a big workplace, but you want to be able to go home on the weekends.'

In Memento, Pearce plays Leonard Shelby, who can remember everything up to the blow on the head he received as he was grappling with the man who raped and murdered his wife. Anything after that he retains for only a few minutes, then his memory is wiped. The only way he can compensate – and try to track his wife's killer – is with an elaborate system of notes, Polaroid photographs and, bizarrely, key information tattooed on his body.

The ground-breaking psychological thriller, the second feature from young British writer-director Christopher Nolan, co-stars Carrie-Anne Moss (The Matrix) and Joe Pantoliano (The Matrix, The Sopranos).

Leonard Shelby is at once a huge challenge and a gift for an actor. 'It was such an inspirational piece to work on that anything difficult or perplexing just went out the window, really,' Pearce says.

He describes his own memory as 'slightly bad', saying: 'I question it even more now, after having made the film. For example, I was very young when my father died and so I guess my memory of him was what I thought it was. After having done this film, it's really made me go back and look at a lot of old photographs and really question the pedestal I might perhaps have put him on.'

The condition suffered by Leonard actually exists, although Pearce did not research it deeply.

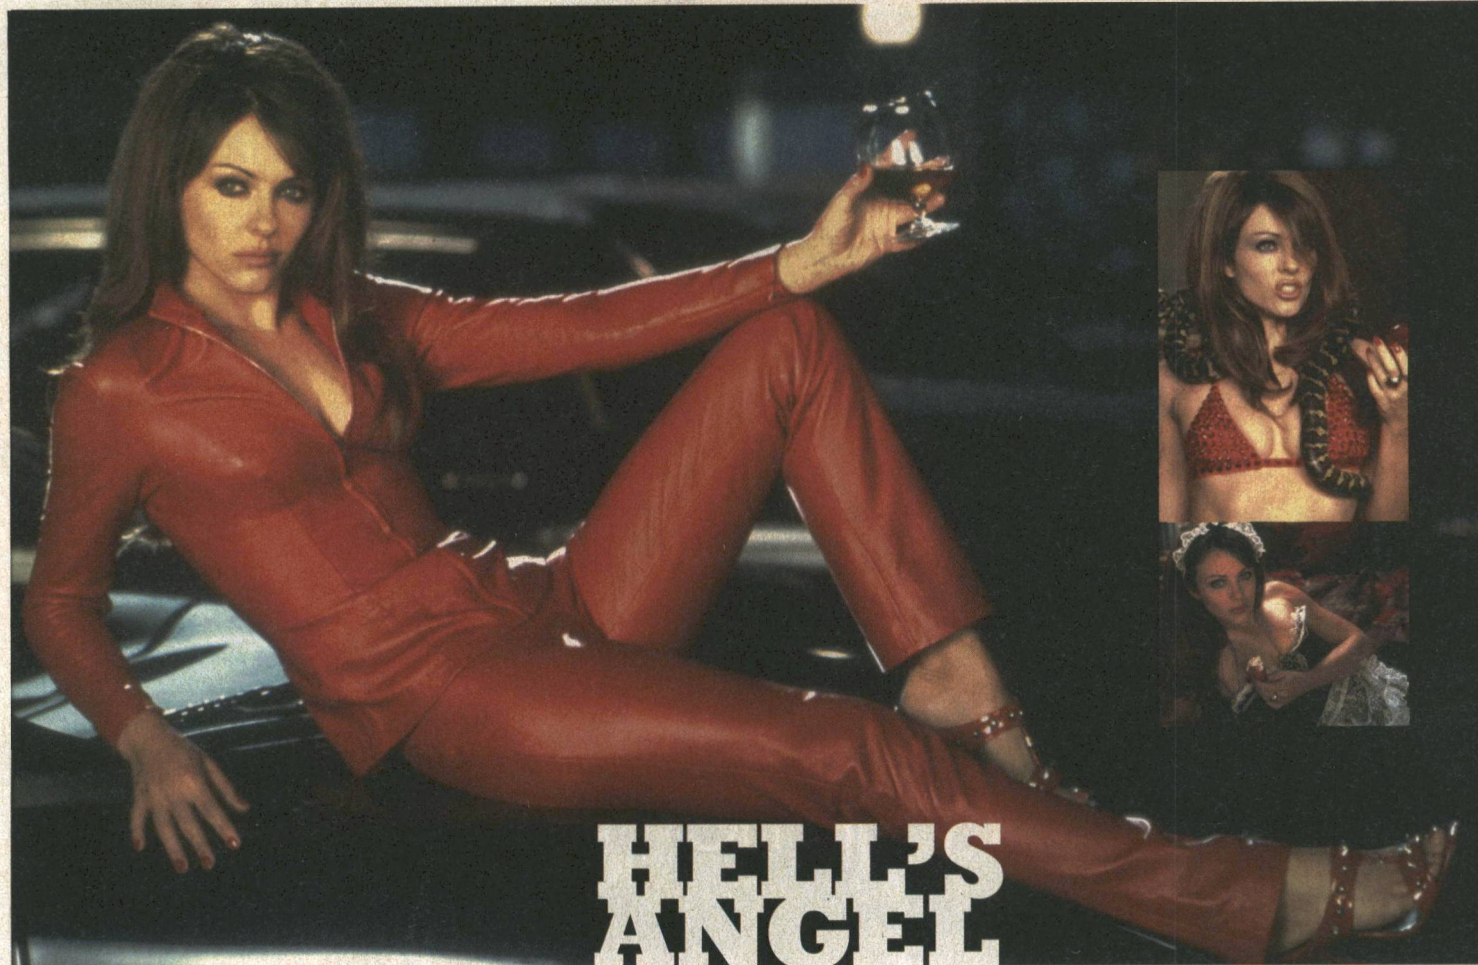

'Chris did such a beautiful, delicate job of observing this character in this very extreme situation that I didn't feel I needed to then go and interview people and so on.' CQ

ELIZABETH HURLEY, ACTRESS, MODEL, gal about Tinseltown and sometime producer, has the look of the Devil about her. That is she plays the Princess of Darkness in Bedazzled, a new take on the 1967 Peter Cook-Dudley Moore comedy, premiering on Front Row this month.

Hurley's a Devil with a difference though. One in possession of a clingy wardrobe, a wicked sense of humour and the ability to grant wishes in exchange for the soul of an unwitting mortal. The unfortunate object of her attention is inept Elliot Richards, played by Brendan Fraser (The Mummy Returns), who will do anything to gain the affections of his workmate, Alison Gardner (Frances O'Connor from A.I. Artificial Intelligence).

'I think it was actually good instinct from our director Harold Ramis to want to make this Devil a girl,' says Hurley. 'He just thought it would add a really nice sort of sexual frisson to the piece and it really worked. The way Brendan plays Elliot – so morally upright, good and kind but very shy – he is really the perfect person for an evil girl to latch on to because he is just the ideal man to torture.'

'You know, there's nobody worth torturing more than someone like sweet Brendan Fraser. It was just a penny from heaven to have him. The Devil is playing on Elliot's terrible insecurities all the time – his fears about not being clever, not being good looking, not being sexy and not being articulate. Of course, he is actually all those things but he just hasn't had the confidence to develop them and I think maybe boys take longer to develop than girls.'

Hurley, 36, was in her element when given free rein to choose her wardrobe for Bedazzled. 'I chose all of it, really. I designed a lot of it. It was a great opportunity to be able to go insane with fashion. You know, normally one is playing a housewife from Birmingham or somewhere and you're always limited by how much money this character would have. On this film there were no rules, no boundaries and it was kind of nice to really go berserk on the physical side of this. Nobody could turn to you and go, "You know, I don't think the Devil would wear those shoes."

'I was quite spoilt. Donatella Versace designed about three of my dresses and Fendi made the red coat I wear, and it was fun to find the sillier things,' she admits. 'I never knowingly wore a heel less than six inches.'

At one point, of course, Hurley was almost as famous for her relationship with actor Hugh Grant, 41, as she was for her own career. While they now live apart after 14 years together, they remain partners in Simian Films, which has produced Extreme Measures and Mickey Blue Eyes and has more projects on its slate.

'We're going to produce more films together and we've got some great stuff,' Hurley reveals. 'We get on great together like this.'

While Hurley admits she lived her personal life in '... a very public way for a long time,' now she is more reticent. It was 'tricky' being without Grant after so long.

'It's quite strange at a time like this,' she says of promoting Bedazzled. 'In some ways it's quite stressful when, you know, you're getting ready for a movie to open. There's so much to approve and to do and I'm very used to having Hugh with me for those times. We've always been there to help each other. We're so used to working together that it's quite hard not being on standby for each other.'

'On this film there were no rules, no boundaries and it was kind of nice to really go berserk ...'

GALAXY QUEST

The cast of a cancelled TV sci-fi show, now reliant on attendances at fan conventions, find themselves called into action to save a planet of rather dense but desperate aliens from imminent destruction in this hilarious spoof. Tim Allen, Sigourney Weaver and Alan Rickman star.

Kim Newman

From brooding anti-hero to Hollywood elder statesman, Paul Newman is one of cinema's best-loved and most enduring stars

Method man

EVER WONDER WHAT WOULD have happened to James Dean's career if he had lived? Would he have wound up playing Vito Corleone and/or Obi-Wan Kenobi, or would it have been a life of Italian Viking pictures and Chevrolet commercials?

Most likely, he would have turned out to be Paul Newman, who literally stepped in where Dean left off. In 1956, after a disastrous screen debut in the ghastly biblical epic The Silver Chalice, Newman took over the role of boxing champion Rocky Graziano in Somebody up There Likes Me, which had been prepared as a Dean vehicle. Later, he scored a big hit as Billy the Kid in The Left-Handed Gun, the kind of tortured Method role Dean specialised in – adding a touch of father-fixated neurosis and bare-chested sex appeal to a Wild West gunslinger written by Gore Vidal as a juvenile delinquent tormented by the failure of all the cowboys to notice how sensitive he is. Like Dean's Jim Stark at the end of Rebel Without a Cause, Billy is shot dead by a cop misled into thinking the redeemable tearaway is going for a gun. Graziano and Billy are typical showy 1950s roles, and the intense, impossibly beautiful young Newman attacks them with teeth and claws.

Long before De Niro took to submerging himself in roles, Newman gave the impression that he'd learned how to box and take a beating for Somebody and then to out-draw Pat Garrett for The Left-Handed Gun. From there, there was only one author to go for if Newman wanted to keep up this level – Tennessee Williams. Newman refined his post-Montgomery Clift sculptured misery as the repressed husband of Elizabeth Taylor in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and the kept gigolo of Geraldine Page in Sweet Bird of Youth.

Both these films were compromised by censorship standards: Newman's Brick can never quite come out and say that he's had a gay relationship with his football buddy and isn't attracted to Taylor in Cat, and his punishment at the hands of local thug Rip Torn in Sweet Bird is reduced to a broken face. But, as in such 1950s efforts as The Rack (brainwashed in Korea) and The Long Hot Summer (opposite Orson Welles), Newman smoulders in a way star actresses had always been allowed to in Hollywood but that was only now becoming acceptable for a manly man.

In the 1960s, Newman hit a winning streak with roles as cool antiheroes, specialising in rebels and heels, in The Hustler (as the pool player he reprised in 1986 in Martin Scorsese's The Color of Money), Hud (another cowboy stud handyman) and Hombre (a half-Indian Western hero). This string of H-for-hit titles meant that when he starred as Ross MacDonald's private eye Lew Archer in The Moving Target he renamed the much-loved character so he could call the film Harper (he returned to the role in The Drowning Pool). Oddly, he didn't insist that Cool Hand Luke be retitled Hot Head Harry, but again found a signature role as the stubborn drifter sent to a prison farm who makes so much trouble for the guards that he gets killed for it, setting an example to the cons.

There were missteps – one of the worst Hitchcocks (Torn Curtain), a Western remake of Rashomon (The Outrage), generally poor thrillers (The Prize), a home movie about his race-driving hobby (Winning) – but he won critical plaudits as a director (sensitively showcasing wife Joanne Woodward in Rachel, Rachel) and conquered the box office in big star vehicles (Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and The Sting). He also reminded us he could act in 1982 as a burnt-out lawyer in The Verdict, and retains elderly charisma in the likes of Blaze, Nobody's Fool, Twilight, The Hudsucker Proxy and Where the Money Is. CJ

PICK OF THE DAY

The Royle Family

UK Gold 9.00pm, 9.40pm, 2.50am, 3.25am The multi-award-winning sitcom that burst onto our screens back in 1998 returns with a re-run of all three series. Filmed in real time without the addition of canned laughter, The Royle Family is a stunning portrayal of a thoroughly mundane Manchester family seen from the familiar setting of the living room sofa. Caroline Aherne's writing has never been finer and she's reunited here with the Mrs Merton team, Henry Normal and Craig Cash, who also plays Denise Best's gormless husband, Dave.

PICK OF THE DAY

Discovery Mastermind Discovery 8.00pm

This long-running popular cerebral quiz, last seen on the BBC in the mid-1990s, returns in the same format but with a new host. Filling Magnus Magnusson's shoes is sharp-witted lawyer-turned-TV-celeb Clive Anderson who's expected to revive the old catchphrase 'I've started, so I'll finish'. The famous black leather chair will also be making a return. Remaining true to the original, the show features four contestants who are questioned for two minutes on their specialist subject and two minutes on general knowledge.

9.00pm-5.00am Classic Shorts 2001 Competition Winner

A showcase of the best entries from the second annual short film competition, held in conjunction with the 45th Regus London Film Festival. The competition is looking for the directors of the future. Launched in 2000, it attracted 241 high-quality entries and three of its top six went on to win BAFTA nominations with the final winner receiving a £10,000 prize. This year's judges include leading directors and actors such as Ridley Scott (Gladiator, Hannibal), Blade Runner, Thelma & Louise, Ewan McGregor (Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace, Trainspotting, Moulin Rouge), John Madden (Captain Corelli's Mandolin, Shakespeare in Love, Mrs Brown), Anthony Minghella (The English Patient, The Talented Mr Ripley), and Mark Herman (Brassed Off, Little Voice).

PICK OF THE DAY

Rock the Blind Play 11.15pm

If you liked Rock Profiles, the music spoof series in which Jamie Theakston conducted interviews with bogus pop stars, then tune in to this special, which is reputedly the only of its kind. Rock Profiles creators and writing partners Matt Lucas (aka Shooting Stars George Dawes) and David Williams have since moved onto other things. In Rock the Blind, they take elements of the Rock Profile style and combine it with a storyline in which Gary Barlow plans the ideal comeback - a charity record called Rock the Blind.

PICK OF THE DAY

Stargate SG-1 Sky One 8.00pm

To mark the 100th episode of this inter-galactic sci-fi adventure series, its co-writer and producer Joseph Malozzi decided a little comedy was in order. 'Wormhole X-Treme' was the dumbest title we could come up with and is a spoof on all of this crazy reality-based [TV], he said. In 'Wormhole X-Treme', Colonel O'Neill (Richard Dean Anderson) and his team become embroiled in the cheesy sci-fi show led by eccentric alien Martin Lloyd (Willie Garson). Watch out for cameo appearances from many of the show's makers.

PICK OF THE DAY

Venice Sinking City Discovery 9.00pm

This new documentary looks at the efforts to save one of Europe's most beautiful cities from sinking into the sea. Located between East and West on the edge of Italy, near the former Yugoslavia, the port of Venice became an unrivalled trade and cultural centre over the centuries. But its beautiful waterways and architecture are built on crumbling foundations in a lagoon which is fast consuming it. Here we are taken through the city's exotic history and the controversial scientific solutions that are being tried to save it.

Jim Carrey, Danny DeVito, Courtney Love
Director Milos Forman's Golden Globe-winning biopic of Taxi star Andy Kaufman with Jim Carrey as the comic daredevil. Pushing the boundaries of stand-up comedy, Kaufman realised that audiences didn't have to laugh and created a new style that has influenced many comedians since. But like many who work in the business of laughs, his own life had its tragedies. He was obsessed with wrestling women, hated having to play dumb on Taxi and died of cancer aged 35.

PICK OF THE DAY

Tulipmania

Discovery 10.30pm
Such is the flower's power that the humble tulip threatened to topple Amsterdam's economy in the middle of the 17th century. This new documentary follows the curious tale from the bloom's first appearance in 16th-century Europe to the frantic trading in Amsterdam which began in 1634 and led to the eventual market collapse in 1637. Such was the Dutch appetite for these vividly coloured flowers that men murdered for them and at one point the Amsterdam stock exchange even dealt in tulips instead of shares.

FRENCH CONNECTION

French striker Thierry Henry is tired of Arsenal being the perennial Premier League runners-up. And, as he tells Luke Nicoli, he's having no second thoughts this season playing more as a unit. We are attacking as a team and we are defending as a team, which is something we haven't done too well since I've been at the club. We are out to show that Arsenal are going to be a hard team to beat home and away this season.'

Togetherness and a strong work ethic are, indeed, essential ingredients if the club are to fulfil their Premiership ambitions, which currently run in tandem with their Champions League commitments. Certainly injuries and suspensions (at the time of writing The Gunners have already had four players sent off) will take their toll as the games mount up, yet according the cold chill, he is adamant that history will not repeat itself for a third successive season and the proverbial bridesmaid tag will, once and for all, be laid to rest.

'We are all sick and tired of finishing second, so it's time we addressed the situation,' says the French international. 'From what I've seen so far this season, we are THIERRY HENRY HAS GROWN accustomed to a winter of discontent at Arsenal. Since his £10.5m move from Juventus, early season form and a concerted title push have always preceded an inconsistency that has brought little festive cheer and, ultimately, the title to Old Trafford.

Yet as Henry braces himself for to Henry, it's a situation the players and management have grown accustomed to.

'That's when a big squad becomes so important,' he points out. 'Recently, we've had injuries to our defenders, but this season players of the quality of Sol Campbell and Giovanni van Bronckhorst have been signed, easing our worries considerably.'

'Sendings off, too, are a way of life but this season we have worked so hard when it has been 10 against 11. I've been chasing the ball when we've been up against it and maybe last season I wasn't doing that. The midfield wasn't doing it enough and maybe the defence as well. That contributed to our failure, but this is the strongest squad, and the most determined, since I've been here.'

Whether Henry's analysis will cause ructions at Old Trafford is debatable, yet the early season form of both sides would suggest the gap has closed a little. Certainly, in terms of manpower, the Frenchman is adamant that Arsène Wenger's troops are more than a match. He adds: 'With quality players like Sol, Gio and Francis Jeffers signed in the summer, some might even say we have a better squad than United. But we shouldn't forget the core of good young players, too. Players like Ashley Cole and Jermaine Pennant are making their mark and nobody's place is safe.'

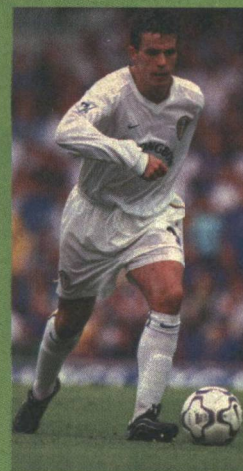

'But I welcome the competition. I'm determined to be more selfish, and more direct as well, because I want to play as much as I can. We now have five exceptional strikers all vying for a place and you only have to have one bad game and you could find yourself out of the team. United's team ethic has always worked well for them, so if we match that, we should be much closer to them this time.'

Yet one area where United always have the upper hand is in terms of location. Man City's demise dictates that the closest Sir Alex Ferguson's side comes to a blood-and-thunder derby is the ill-tempered games with Leeds and Liverpool. Arsenal, on the other hand must face their northern counterparts, as well as 12 derby games, including this month's game against Charlton. It makes an assault on the title all the more difficult.

'Derby games are not like normal matches,' is Henry's take on the situation. 'The players do not want to lose, the fans certainly don't want their team to lose, and the football sometimes suffers. This is hard for all London teams but we shouldn't see it as an excuse; if we want to win the league we have to beat all teams, although the task is that much harder.'

Yet as long as Henry continues his rich vein of form, you get the feeling Arsenal are always in with a chance. His standing in the team is, arguably, the most important and the Highbury faithful will be pleased to know that he is ready to commit his future to the club. With coach Arsène Wenger yet to sign a new contract at the time of writing, there has been talk that his departure could spark a French exodus, yet Henry insists he would be happy to stay at Arsenal, whatever the circumstance. 'We all hope the manager will sign a new contract, but regardless of his situation, I am happy at Arsenal. I feel settled in the team, in London, and the move has been good to me.' cg

ON THE SPOT

Leeds's defender Ian Harte opens up to Luke Nicoli

What's the most memorable match you've played in?

I think most players would say their debut and it was no different for me. I made my debut against Reading in the League Cup, back in the 1995-96 season. Howard Wilkinson was the manager and I thought I would just be on the bench for some experience. Then, after 75 minutes, he told me I was going on, and I was terrified! I remember Andy Gray made his debut at the same time, so it wasn't too bad, but my enduring memory is fluffing a sitter when Gary Kelly laid the ball on a plate for me!

Who's your footballing hero and why?

Without sucking up to the gaffer too much, I would have to say David O'Leary. Liam Brady was a hero as a very young lad, but David was a legend when I was growing up in Ireland and everyone remembers him for scoring that penalty against Romania in the 1990 World Cup. I was a bit in awe of him when he first came to the club with George Graham, but he is a great fellow and it's been a terrific experience playing under his leadership. He has always given younger players like me a chance and I'll be eternally grateful to him for that.

Which team do you support and why?

In Ireland it is either Manchester United or Liverpool, and I opted for Anfield. You usually follow the team that your dad supports, but he was a Southampton fan and I was having none of that! When I was in the playground, I pretended I was Ian Rush – who was by far the best striker in Europe at the time. In those days, I used to be a centre-forward, which is maybe why I get my fair share of goals these days.

What's the best piece of footballing advice you've been given?

My old Leeds youth team coach Paul Hart always told us that talent and ability was only one side to becoming a professional footballer. He would remind us that if we made it at a club like Leeds, we would be role models to thousands of people. He gave us discipline and made sure we conducted ourselves properly both on and off the pitch. I've taken that with me all the way into the first team.

So can Leeds realistically win the league this season?

If I didn't believe that, I wouldn't bother turning up. We've got a young group of players but we've now got another year's experience, so we'll be there or thereabouts. Leeds are a massive club and with the money invested, we really need to win silverware this season. Any cup will do but, obviously, the league is our priority. Not that it will be easy; there are four or five teams with the same ambition. But the fact we're not in the Champions League could work in our favour. Don't get me wrong, I wish I was in that competition again, but at least we won't have as much travelling to do this season.

For many Premiership teams, a game against Manchester United is something to fear. But Steven Gerrard relishes Liverpool's fixtures against the title-holders, writes Darren Bentley

MATCHING UP

STEVEN GERRARD CAN HARDLY wait to tuck into Liverpool's tasty lunchtime clash with Manchester United this month. And that's because the England midfielder is unlike the rest of the Premiership in wanting to pit his wits against United hardman Roy Keane.

The Irish star has destroyed opponents across Europe in United's colours in the past few seasons with his drive from the centre of the park and unrelenting tackles. But despite his tender years, 21-year-old Gerrard relishes the physical challenge posed by Keane – especially as the winner of the clash is sure to help his side to victory.

He says: 'If you look at United it's always Roy Keane and Paul Scholes who are pulling the strings. Keane's engine impresses me and his passing is so accurate. He's developed every part of his game so he is now a complete midfielder.'

'Although I enjoy facing him, I do need to get a bit fitter and stronger. You look at Roy Keane and every aspect of his game is quality and that's what I'm aiming to do.'

Liverpool are in the Champions League this season for the first time and Gerrard admits turning out in Europe's top club competition has helped ease the jealousy he felt about United.

'I felt envy when I watched Manchester United playing in the Champions League over the past few years – I knew that was what I wanted. I wanted to be playing against those great players like Manchester United were.'

But despite previously suffering from a green tint, Gerrard has played down claims that sets of players from either club failed to hit it off when meeting up to play for England.

He adds: 'When I first went down to England training, I thought to myself that because of the rivalry between United and Liverpool there wouldn't be a good atmosphere.'

'But they were all shaking hands with each other. That surprised me. The United players went out of their way to make me feel welcome, all talking to me.'

'One time, we actually all flew down from Manchester to London together and mixed well. I didn't expect that, but then that is our job, to go and play football for England and bring success back for the country.'

Players from each side are now forming the nucleus of Sven-Göran Eriksson's team at a time when England's future appears more vibrant than in the past 30 years.

And Gerrard feels it's not just the likes of David Beckham and Michael Owen that should give the country's long-suffering fans cause to dream of a World Cup win. He claims

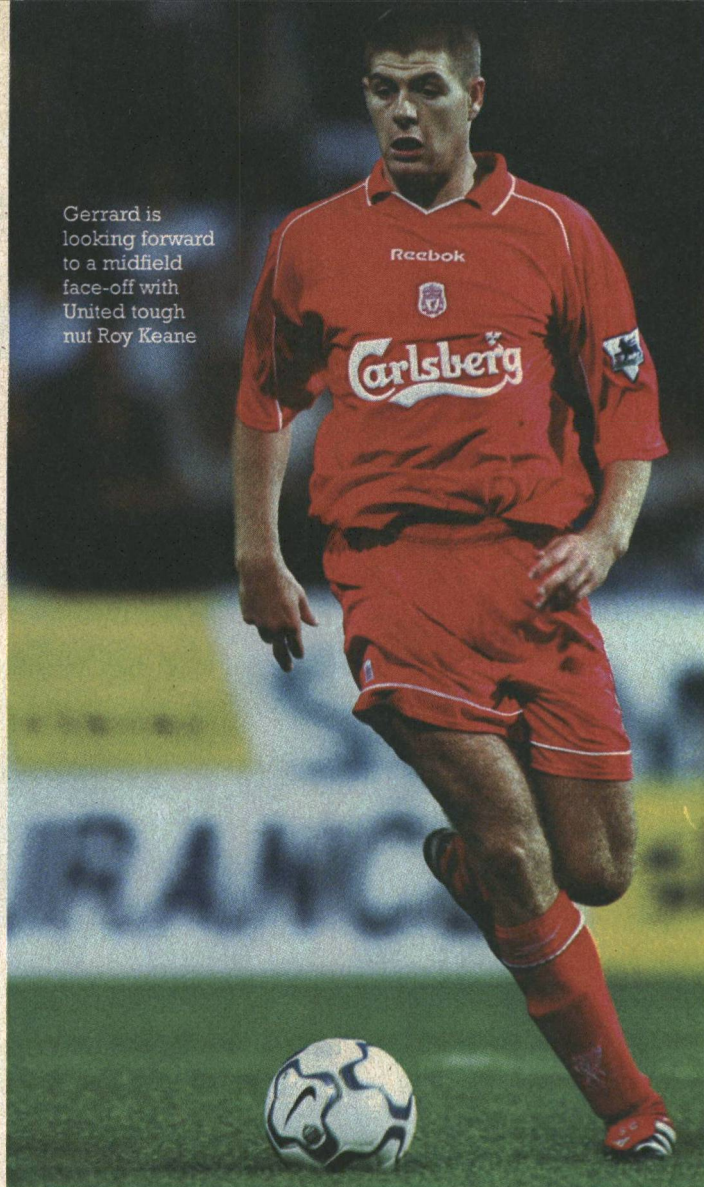

'I felt envy when I watched Manchester United playing in the Champions League over the past few years – I knew that was what I wanted'

LIVE

Liverpool v Manchester United

Sky Sports 1,
Sunday 4th, 11.00am

Gerrard is looking forward to a midfield face-off with United tough nut Roy Keane there are plenty more youngsters waiting to flood the England ranks if Liverpool is anything to go by.

'There is a great generation coming through – I especially see it here at Liverpool,' he adds. 'I see Michael every day and players like Jamie Carragher and Danny Murphy, all very good players. And it's not just here – every club has two or three good young English players.'

Along with Owen (injuries permitting), Gerrard is the leading light of the Liverpool clan that's heading the England revolution – but at club level he has yet to find a fixed position. His versatility has seen him shunted from right back, to right midfield and, without doubt his best position, commanding the middle of the park.

And in Liverpool's rotation system he even finds his role as a central midfielder changing depending on who he lines up alongside. 'With certain people, I play differently,' he said. 'Gary McAllister likes to go forward more than Didi Hamann. If it's Didi I can get more shots at goal because I can get forward more, but I don't mind which combination we use as long as I play.'

Playing has not always been easy for Gerrard after groin strains threatened to curtail his journey to the top of the English game. But aided by manager Gerard Houllier's scientific approach to football, the midfielder now appears to have ironed out the problems that left him unable to complete two games in a week.

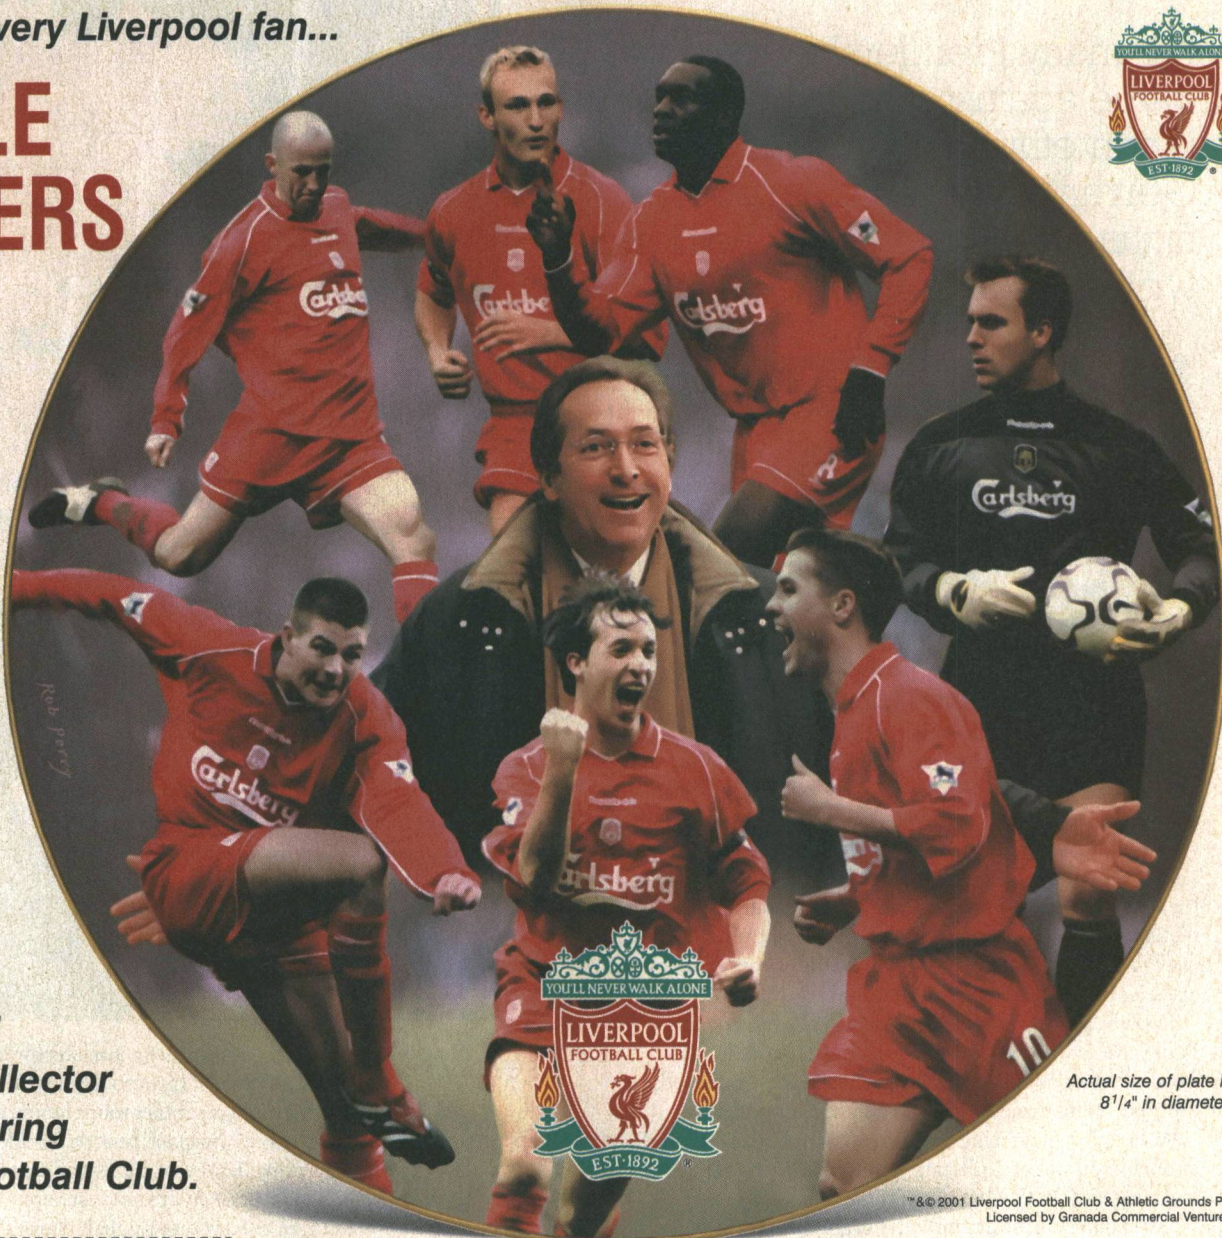

'My back has improved since the gaffer sent me to a French osteopath, who changed my posture and manipulated my body into the correct shape. I can't believe how much I have improved. I feel confident going out on to the pitch knowing I can complete 90 minutes in back-to-back games. I can't wait until I don't have to talk about it any more.'

After the disappointment of the Lions defeat, England's Danny Grewcock is eager for revenge against the Aussies. Interview: Chris Hatherall

ENGLAND EXPECTS

THE LIONS WERE BEATEN, the Ashes were conceded. But Danny Grewcock says all is not lost – because there is still one last chance to put the Australians in their place.

Rugby's world champions come to Twickenham this month looking to take part in another display of Pommie bashing. But this time second-row forward Grewcock believes the English are ready and waiting.

The Bath star is still smarting after playing in the British Lions side which went down 2-1 in Australia this summer – and then coming home to watch Shane Warne and co complete an even more convincing triumph in the cricket.

'We certainly owe them one,' he says. 'It wasn't easy for me because it was so disappointing the way it ended for the Lions in Australia. We did well to win the first test and it was an amazing atmosphere. But that counted for nothing in the end – and as far as I'm concerned the whole thing is just history.'

'When I look back on my own performances, I feel I could have done better and that's disappointing. But playing Australia again so quickly is a good chance to put that right, as it is for one or two of the other lads as well. But in the end England is a very different team to the Lions and we shouldn't get the two mixed up. In many ways the England team is a more established side than the Lions because the players know each other so well and have worked together many times before.'

'Clive Woodward has different ideas and different ways of playing and he will have a game plan for Australia, there's no doubt about that. It's a great game to test yourself in because when it comes to it there are few arguments that Australia are the best team in the world – and have been for the last few years.

'The sight of them walking out at Twickenham should be enough to get any rugby player or rugby fan going.'

The atmosphere at the home of rugby is likely to be electric, and although England posted a famous victory against the Aussies in the same match last year, no-one is expecting it to be easy.

'Australia are certain to want revenge for last time,' says Grewcock, who forms a lethal partnership with England captain Martin Johnson. 'We won that one in the last minute and I know for a fact they haven't forgotten it. They will be coming here to put that record straight and we are relishing the chance to have another crack at them. But it will be a very, very difficult game for us.'

'A few players may have changed in their line-up since the Lions tour, but I'm pretty certain they will come here with 22 world-class players to choose from. They are too good a side to sit back and admire what they have already achieved, they are always wanting to win something else.'

'People said they may have to take a breather after beating the Lions, but instead they went on and won the Tri-Nations as well. That shows how motivated they are and we will have to be at our very best to beat them.'

'The only good news for us is that they won't have John Eales leading them out because he has retired. When you look at the list of what he won with Australia it is absolutely incredible. He's been a huge part of it for them and there's no doubt in my mind they will miss him, both as a leader and as a player. The team will lack something without him, but you have to say they have very good men to replace him. George Gregan will probably be captain and he is a great player and inspiration as well.'

'It's going to be a great battle.'

Flex works around you.

"I just want to say stop thinking about it! Get Flex today it works!"

M Skene, Aberdeen

You like to pump iron, you have to push pen – no sweat

You work out. You're keen to stay in shape. But it's not always easy. Some days you just can't get to the gym. No sweat. The unique Flex Abs muscle toning system fits in perfectly with you. Just wrap it around your waist like a belt. It's comfortable with no fiddly wires to worry about. Wear it for only 20 minutes a day and in weeks you'll have a firmer, flatter stomach.

Does it really work?

Yes. In trials, 9 out of 10 users felt firmer and 8 out of 10 felt flatter. With a 20% increase in abdominal strength. Use your belt every day and you should see visible results in just 4-8 weeks – some users even feel a difference after 10 days.

Clinically proven technology

It's simple and safe.[†] Flex Abs uses revolutionary CSI™ technology to work your muscles, just like when you exercise:

- special pads on your belt stimulate the nerves where they are concentrated
- these nerves control and contract all the stomach muscles – not just those under the belt
- 'smart' technology guides you through 4 exercise programmes, from Introductory to Advanced
- each one has an intensity level of 0-99, giving you complete control
- LCD screen shows your past and current exercises

8 week money back guarantee

ALAN CURBISHLEY

Professional referees, the escalation in players' wages and Charlton's injury crisis all give Alan cause for concern

I WAS NEVER IN favour of the introduction of professional referees. I believe they have a hard enough job anyway, and their assessments are already strict. But the situation will be worse now their livelihood depends on it. Refs are going to be under a lot more pressure to maintain their professional status, and they might feel that everything will have to be done by the letter of the law in order to justify their wages. I just don't think, under those circumstances, there's a chance of them overseeing the game with any common sense. It's not as if refs aren't going to make wrong decisions anymore because they've turned professional.

I watched two Nationwide matches recently, and I'm sure if they had been refereed by Premiership refs there would have been a lot more cautions and players sent off. The Nationwide refs seem to let the game flow a bit more.

That's not to say that I'd like to see the game revert to how it was when I was playing, when people got away with murder. Opposing players were stopped and that was that. Thankfully, things aren't like that anymore, but, certainly, in high-profile derby games, tackles go flying – if they don't, then the game isn't what we want it to be.

I've never complained about referees' decisions, because I know they're made fairly. I don't think any ref has gone out on purpose to favour one team. But I would like to see the introduction of a second ref, perhaps sitting upstairs. With contentious issues, such as penalties, off-the-ball fouls, or trying to determine whether a ball has crossed the line, I don't see a problem with a second referee alerting the ref on the pitch to the problem. There should be a system in place where the ref can get some help with do-or-die decisions.

Another development to be concerned about is the escalation in players' wages. Football clubs are in a no-win situation here because players and agents are taking all the money out of the game. Over 70 per cent of the income of many clubs is going on wages, and to have that amount of money written off and not re-invested in essential facilities is dangerous. And I can't see the situation getting better for the next few years. If the next TV deal isn't bigger, then there could be problems ahead for one or two clubs.

A manager has got to be strong-willed not to pay what the club can't afford. Although it's difficult not to, as every club wants to be successful. On the other hand, you've got teams like Bolton who haven't spent a thing and have flirted with the top of the league – so it's not all about money.

The start of our season was hampered by a terrible run of injuries. To have seven first-team players out at the same time is very difficult, and I defy any team outside the top six to maintain a settled, cohesive side with the sort of problems we've had. We lost all our midfield at one point and the consequence of that was we had to mix and match and put players in positions in which they weren't comfortable. For instance, Jason Euell played centre midfield in the first game at home to Everton, centre forward away to Ipswich, centre midfield in the next game against

It's not as if refs aren't going to make wrong decisions any more because they've turned professional Fullham and centre forward for 20 minutes against Leeds. The remainder of that game he played in midfield because of Graham Stuart's sending off.

The whole thing was a mess in terms of team selection and consistency. One or two players got carried away a bit last year, thinking that we had established ourselves as a Premiership side. But with all the injuries we had at the start of this season, we really were no better off than a newly promoted team having to fight for everything again.

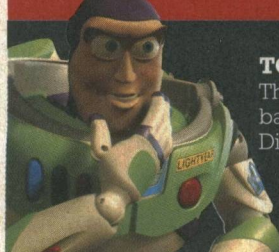

Obviously, I hope we've something resembling a settled side this month when we play Arsenal and West Ham on cable [see listings for details].

Arsenal are a fantastic side, and I take great pleasure in going to watch them when I can. I admire the way Arsène Wenger has set about managing the club – he hasn't spent a vast amount of money and he's produced a very good team. The reason Arsenal didn't win the league last season was because of their poor away form, but they've already started to address that problem.

West Ham, meanwhile, had a difficult start to the season, but they've got decent enough players to see them through. Wenger has complained about the amount of London derbies this season, but we quite like them – and one of the joys of being in the Premiership for us is playing West Ham. cg
